

Rhodesia Black Ministers Just 'Window Dressing'

THE OUTCASTS Ben Wicks

Times News Services

SALISBURY—The first black cabinet ministers in Rhodesia's history were sworn in today in a move dismissed as "window dressing" and "a waste of time," by nationalist sources.

Four of the seven — none of whom were named by Prime Minister Ian Smith — are tribal chiefs and sources say that although they have some support within their immediate areas, they lack real political standing.

"It won't put off the inevitable day when majority rule will be achieved," one nationalist source said.

Josiah Chinamano, vice-president of the African National Council's moderate faction, said "it is not enough to present a black face — the people themselves must choose the representatives of their liking."

"Unless this is done, it is a waste of time."

Rhodesian tribal chiefs are paid a government stipend and allowances based on size of their respective tribes.

Some also receive a salary for sitting in the Senate, the upper house of Parliament.

They are opposed unanimously to the guerrilla war, which the nationalists have stepped up following the breakdown of the constitutional talks.

Smith announced his new plan hours after U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger in a speech in Lusaka, Zambia, castigate the Rhodesia government for its intransigence.

Kissinger pledged full support for Britain's demand that Rhodesia, which broke away from British rule in 1965, agree to a black-majority Government within two years.

In his Lusaka speech, Kissinger also said there is still time for South Africa to achieve reconciliation of its people for the benefit of all.

But, he warned, the time limit now is shorter than generally perceived a few years ago.

Apartheid remains an issue of great concern to those committed to racial justice and human dignity, he added.

"No one, including the leaders of black Africa, challenges the right of white South Africa to live in their country," Kissinger said.

Hospital Union Talking

has received a report from Sims later today.

Gerow said the HEU will allow members of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., the Health Sciences Association and the International Union of Operating Engineers to cross picket lines at Vancouver General in the event of a strike.

Those three unions are also without contracts with the hospital industry.

Jack Campbell, executive director of the 6,000-member Health Sciences Association, which represents technicians and paramedical hospital employees, said his union's sympathies "certainly lie with the HEU."

His union would be meeting soon with the HEU to figure out a strike plan "that we both can live with," he added.

The Blair recommendations would have amounted to an increase in wages and fringe benefits of 15 per cent, according to the industry, or 13 per cent, according to the union.

The HLRA said it would stick with its policy of limiting all increases, both in wages and fringe benefits, to eight per cent during the one year agreement.

$12,000 Park Rent For Youth Baseball?

The Senior Babe Ruth Baseball League won't use city-owned Royal Athletic Park this year if the rent goes up to $12,000 compared to last year's $1,000, says Cliff Newburg, vice-president.

"Moms and Dads, now paying 50 cents to get in to see a game, would have to increase the charge to about $20 each if we are going to pay that kind of rent (for the park)," Newburg said.

Newburg predicted the park would be left vacant a great deal this year because of rent increases.

JET CRASH KILLS 37

Times News Services

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands—An American Airlines jet carrying 88 persons overshoot the runway on landing Tuesday, careened into a gas station across a highway and broke up in a fury of flames. The airline today reported 37 persons dead or missing.

He said city council should not charge any rental for amateurs.

"They should let us have the park for nothing and they can have the proceeds from the gate admission," he said.

The league has six teams with 14 boys between the ages of 16 and 18 on each, and volunteer managers and coaches for each team.

Newburg said the league would likely have to play its games at Windsor Park.

New rates will be $50 or 55 per cent of the gross gate receipts up to $100 and 35 per cent of the gross receipts after that, plus 5 per cent for ticket handling. In addition, there's a $30-an-hour charge for the use of floodlights, compared to the former $5 charge.

Chairman of the city's recreation committee, Ald. Ron McKenzie said he is opposed to subsidizing groups "which don't help themselves" and added that under no circumstances should any recreation facility run at a loss.

"I hope by the end of June, council will sit down and look at the whole picture. Council will just have to bite the bullet on this one," he said when the issue came up at a committee meeting earlier this week.

If council feels that recreation facilities should be subsidized, he said, it should give grants to the various groups using the facilities, but before making any grants to any group, "I would want to see a financial statement to find out whether or not they are relying 100 per cent on the city."

Ald. Bill Tindall, council's finance committee chairman, opposed McKenzie's suggestion.

"Are they community facilities or profit-making enterprises?" he asked.

sent, Waterland said the resource industries do need to band together to publicize their contribution to the provincial economy.

"I would urge the mining and forestry support industry to pool your resources into a really good, proud and informative campaign."

"Let's organize a committee to create and execute that effort," he said.

"Mining and forestry are not going to devastate the province or deplete the resources. Not for a thousand years can we possibly run out of ore, and then technology will create new resources," he said.

"The forest industry can and will grow trees faster than they can harvest them. We cannot and will not run out of trees."

Laik called the minister's attitudes "pre-Cambrian" and he hopes the incident and the remarks were just the result of inexperience.

MFA Borrows $52 Million

The Municipal Finance Authority has borrowed $52 million on the New York money market at 8 1/2 per cent, Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, said today.

The funds will be used by member municipalities throughout the province to finance a variety of projects. A total of $3.3 million will go to the regional district, Saanich, Central Saanich and North Saanich, most of it to finance sewers.

Campbell, one of the authority's directors, said current rates on the Canadian money market are 10.5 to 10 1/2 per cent. The loan in the U.S. is at "the best (least costly) interest rate seen for quite a little while."

The MFA has received considerable criticism for foreign borrowing. It underwrote in 1972, unfavorable exchange rates between Canadian dollars and Swiss francs and German marks since then have increased repayment costs considerably.

McGeer to Meet Private Insurers

ICBC president Pat McGeer will begin talks with private insurance companies next week to discuss conditions under which the firms might return to the automobile insurance business in B.C.

McGeer said the government is working toward a spring, 1977, target for inviting private industry back.

He will meet members of the Insurance Bureau of Canada next week, he said, to find out under what circumstances they would come back... "not that that would influence what we'll do."

The minister made the statements after releasing the third annual report of the insurance corporation.

Figures in the report confirm an accumulated deficit of $185.5 million after two years of Autoplan.

Total losses for the corporation last year were $148.6 million including a $144.18 million loss for Autoplan and a $4.39 million loss for the general insurance side.

The figures take into account $170 million in unpaid claims which might have to be adjusted when the claims actually come in.

McGeer said taxpayers will be paying off the deficit for some years but the corporation will now be put on a paying basis.

The government is looking towards allowing the private insurance industry to compete in "some aspects" of ICBC's business, said McGeer, but he would not disclose the nature of those aspects.

Asked if the corporation might become a dumping ground for poor risks, the minister said only that all insurance companies compete for the good risks.

ICBC, if operated efficiently, should have an advantage over other private firms, he said, because the Crown corporation does not pay taxes.

Total revenues for Autoplan last year were $183 million while claims totalled $273 million and expenses totalled $54 million.

Investment income for the year decreased substantially from $9.2 million in 1974 to $3.8 million in 1975.

McGEER

Administrative costs for the year increased from $23 million to $30.7 million but the report indicated that the increase is due to growth in administrative operations which would have been covered by increased revenues if premiums had been set at a higher level reflecting the actual insurance costs.

Salary increases granted ICBC workers after a 15-week strike last year will cost the corporation about $11 million a year, according to the report.

Two autobody shops operated by ICBC at Surrey and Prince George lost $177,000 from September, 1975, to February, 1976.

The report said, however, the shops are expected to show a profit in the coming year after the burden of start-up costs are overcome.

The general insurance side of the corporation is already one of the largest in B.C. and includes 75,000 policies with gross premiums reaching $24.2 million.

Net premiums for the general insurance side were $11 million while net claims were $10.6 million.

Expenses increased $2 million to $4.7 million last year, with higher commission rates accounting for a large part of increased costs of general insurance.

The $4.39 million loss for general insurance last year is added to $2.19 million the previous year.

KING

VOTER BUY-OFF?

Auto insurance and sales tax rates will be significantly reduced just before the next B.C. election, Opposition leader Bill King predicted in the legislature Tuesday.

King said the Social Credit government is building up a huge surplus so it can buy off the voters with their own money.

The heavy financial penalties imposed on British Columbians are designed to allow the government to put together an attractive pre-election package, King charged.

He said there will be a surplus of hundreds of millions of dollars at the end of the current fiscal year.

The tactics are intended to fool the public into believing the Socialists have pulled B.C. out of the hole, King said.

$24,000 JOB TO JEROME

Former Olympic sprinter Harry Jerome, once considered a possible Social Credit candidate in the Vancouver East byelection, is being paid $2,000 a month as a recreation consultant for the provincial government.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy told the legislature Tuesday that Jerome's appointment is for six months, but could be extended.

He has been retained by the government to survey and report on all recreational facilities available in the province. His salary is officially listed at $24,000 a year, slightly more than he would have made had he been elected an MLA.

CIDC Has $291,872 In the Bank

The Capital Improvement District Commission has built up a bank account of $291,872.

Financial statements from the commission, tabled in the legislature Tuesday, show the group received $350,000 from the provincial government and $6,255 from other sources last year.

But it spent only $108,805, leaving a surplus of $147,450 for the year in addition to a $144,422 surplus from the year before.

The commission, set up by the government for beautification and development of the capital region, spent $94,559 on the lower promenade of the Inner Harbor Causeway last year.

A total of $11,481 was spent on Bathhouse Cove in Saanich and $2,785 on the Gorge Waterway.

Recycling Depot Collects $1,000

The Capital Region recycling depot Tuesday received a $1,000 provincial government grant.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said after discussions with project members, the government decided to provide the grant to help defray operating costs and expenses of the depot.

A total of about $20,000 was cut from the project's budget earlier this year by the Capital Regional Board.

Gov't Rejects Longhouse Plea

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy has turned down a bid by Cowichan Valley Indians to rent Thunderbird Park Longhouse as an outlet for their carvings and silver work.

She said Tuesday it was decided to honor terms of an agreement made with the late Mungo Martin, who built the Longhouse in 1933, to have it kept "as a place to keep native music and dancing alive, and to make people aware of the traditions of his people."

"The house at Thunderbird Park was Mungo Martin's big house, into which he put his love, labor and some funds, incorporating various features reflecting his personal privileges," said McCarthy.

"We don't feel we can break this agreement made with Mungo Martin, one of our finest native artists," said McCarthy, "and it is also against policy to permit the commercial use of areas in the museum complex by any but registered non-profit societies and concessions awarded by tender."

A group of native carvers, silversmiths and dancers, mostly from the Cowichan Valley, met with McCarthy about 10 days ago to request use of the longhouse for demonstrations of dancing and music and for sale of their wares.

More Candor About Prisons

In the wake of the sixth hostage incident in 15 months at the British Columbia penitentiary it's ironic that the Farris inquiry report on the original incident, which left one prison employee dead, still remains secret. Nearly one year and five more incidents later the document is still tightly clutched in secretive federal hands. The threadbare argument that the report can't be published until all charges against the inmates taking part in the incident have been resolved is apparently under review. But that statement is of little reassurance to the public which foots the bill for what amounts to a secret operation.

Let us examine the most recent case. Three B.C. pen guards were taken hostage at knifepoint by four inmates being held in protective custody. The issue was resolved 14 hours later when the guards were released unharmed. But prison officials would release few details of the drama. For example, how do prisoners get access to knives? It is not the first time inmates have produced weapons at the B.C. pen. A prison spokesman would only answer that it was "a security problem" and he couldn't talk about it. While we can agree that security is certainly a problem at the B.C. pen the public deserves better answers than this.

It costs about $16,000 to maintain each of Canada's approximately 20,000 prison inmates each year. We also know that a disproportionate number of natives are incarcerated, often for minor crimes, not to mention that our obsolete prison facilities are often overcrowded and inhumane. In the B.C. pen, for example 52 prisoners are being held in a 44-cell area, formerly the solitary confinement unit, now designated as an area of protective custody. Yet beyond these bare facts plus the odd tidbit that leaks out following a riot, sit-in or hostage incident, Canadians know little about the penal institutions that cost them millions each year.

No private business would give its manager such carte blanche. But Canadians allow their government complete autonomy in dealing with human beings in the care of the state. Allegations about brutal guards are never resolved in public; sexual assaults among inmates are an accepted thing, the same as beatings and something called "prison justice." It is another country in there, and by all reports a tyrannical state that often boils over into violence.

The root of the matter goes back to the criminal code. Too many Canadians are in prison for crimes that could be absolved through restitution or suspended sentences. Reforming the law would reduce the prison population to some degree, but a need exists for new facilities in line with modern penology.

During a period of restraint prisons will obviously occupy a low priority — not that they ever had much of a priority in the best of times — yet the very least the public should expect is candor from its government about the situation. The immediate release of the Farris inquiry, unexpurgated, would be a start in making amends.

BCR Blues

Sometimes we think the only reason for the existence of the British Columbia Railway is so northerners won't be able to point their fingers at Victoria and accuse the provincial government of giving everything to us smug inhabitants of the southwest corner of the province. We get big subsidies on public transit and ferries across Georgia Strait, and the hinterland gets equally large gifts for that constant money-loser which successive administrations refer to euphemistically as a resource railway.

The BCR makes disasters like the Penn Central fiasco look good. Even the Penn Central once made money, but the BCR rarely turned a profit and few similar private enterprise operations would have lasted very long without the BCR's funny bookkeeping, the "purchase of shares" by the province, the interest-free loans which became non-repayable grants.

It was born in provincial chauvinism, constantly starved of revenues and for most of its existence started nowhere and went nowhere, linking the Cariboo with Squamish on tidewater, and North Vancouver with Horseshoe Bay.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett revitalized the PGE, connecting up the separate bits and extending (overextending, it turned out) lines into the undeveloped north. His government poured $120 million of general revenues into the railway, the Barrett government nearly as much.

What has B.C. got now? In the north, it's clear the two extensions to Fort Nelson and Dease Lake have run up huge cost overruns, were badly designed and engineered (Bennett personally chose the routes and ordered them built in haste, the story goes) while the projections of revenues and development which would follow in the railway's wake were wildly optimistic.

The BCR competes wastefully in the north with Canadian National Railways. At least, the Barrett administration took tentative steps towards BCR-CNR co-operation in the northwest. But it too believed blindly in the automatic benefits that would follow from the railway's extension, even after experts advised to the contrary.

Can B.C. continue to afford such an extravagance? In good times the BCR was only marginally profitable, it seems, and in bad times a severe drain on provincial revenues. The NDP in opposition now talks of refinancing the railway, starting with a clean slate. But there's no evidence such an "ICBC solution" would work.

It is clear, however, that the railway is badly in need of a shake-up. It continues to be plagued with strikes and shutdowns. Through three changes of government it continues to lose money. The management presently in charge — if those nominally at the top of an enterprise which has suffered such interference as the BCR can be said to be in charge — doesn't seem able to cope, either because of political restrictions or sheer inability.

The first step towards recovery should be an investigation, and since the BCR is a public corporation, it should be a public inquiry. A royal commission, with a strong independent staff and powers to look into all dark corners, at least can tell us what's wrong and point the way to better times.

JAMES RESTON

Saving Free World, Again

WASHINGTON — Before he left on a two-week trip to Africa, U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger issued another strong warning to the Soviet Union. This is becoming a regular affair, but it seems to be having more effect on the presidential campaign than on the Soviets.

The United States was pursuing a dual policy toward Moscow, he said. "One, we will resist irresponsible action of Soviet use of military power or the use of surrogate forces... the United States has the military power and the political will to resist irresponsible actions."

"Two, we remain ready to work (with the Soviets) for a more peaceful world." These verbal blasts, usually accompanied by offers of cooperation, do not however satisfy his critics who accuse him of talking like Churchill and acting like Chamberlain, but it is not at all clear what actions his critics would have him take, or even what he himself would recommend if Moscow's "irresponsible" and "unacceptable" intervention in Africa continues.

Defence Cuts

Ronald Reagan would increase the military budget beyond the appropriations requested by President Ford — the largest peacetime defence budget ever proposed to congress — but congress is threatening to cut that, and nobody running for the White House is suggesting that we take military action to halt the spread of communism or stop selling grain to the USSR or break off the arms talks in order to halt the spread of communism.

What is really being questioned in this developing debate is whether the United States really does have the "will" to resist "irresponsible" Soviet actions, whether the consensus that backed the policy of containing communism in the generation after the Truman Doctrine has collapsed and given way to a policy of "neutrality" and even of isolationism.

Norman Podhoretz, the editor of Commentary magazine, suggests that perhaps a new consensus is developing in America, with the leadership of Kissinger, in favor of a policy that is "making the world safe for communism."

There is now, he seems to believe, a coalition of liberal and conservative "elites" that has accepted the proposition that the United States should never go to war for any purpose other than defense of its own territory against attack.

He points to the lack of support for even indirect intervention by the United States in favor of the anti-communists in Portugal, Angola, and Italy as evidence.

"The issue boils down in the end," he says, "to the question of will. Have we lost the will to defend the free world — yes, the free world — against the spread of communism. Contemplating the strength of isolationist sentiment in the United States today, one might easily conclude that we have. Among the elites, both liberal and conservative, isolationism is very strong."

HENRY KISSINGER
... a Churchill-Chamberlain act

the will to defend the free world — yes, the free world — against the spread of communism. Contemplating the strength of isolationist sentiment in the United States today, one might easily conclude that we have. Among the elites, both liberal and conservative, isolationism is very strong."

Kissinger himself has recently complained about what he called "a self-destructive isolationist course in American life," and has warned that this country may soon "become an isolated fortress island in a hostile and turbulent global sea, awaiting the ultimate confrontation with the only response we will not have denied ourselves — massive retaliation."

Vice-president Nelson Rockefeller returned from his recent world trip with a gloomy report that many of our best friends were also questioning the American will to resist. Not so long ago, of course, they were complaining about the activities of the CIA against the spread of communism, but now they were asking whether, after the defeat in Vietnam, even the CIA had been crippled by its critics.

Maybe the election will help resolve this issue about the will of the people, as distinguished from the "new isolationists" in the universities, congress and the press. Podhoretz notes that lately there has been a reaction against the one-way aspects of détente, some within the intellectual community, much more within the labor movement, some in the business world and some in the world of electoral politics.

Churchillian Rhetoric

"Still," he concludes, "these sentiments have not yet been decisively tested in the national political arena, and until they are so tested, the question — the ultimately crucial question — of whether the new isolationism is as pervasive among the masses of Americans as it is among the elites, will have to remain moot."

"If it should turn out that the new isolationism has indeed triumphed among the people... then the United States will celebrate its 200th birthday by betraying the heritage of liberty which has earned it the wonder and envy of the world from the moment of its founding to this, and by helping to make that world safe for the most determined and ferocious and barbarous enemies of liberty ever to have appeared on earth."

This too, of course, is Churchillian rhetoric, but there is enough agreement even from Kissinger himself to make the issue a central topic of the presidential campaign.

"... of course, we can't afford to go to the Olympics... but how about an Olympic sweatshirt, tea cosy, sun visor, cigarette lighter, ballpoint pen or shopping bag instead?"

RICHARD GWYN

Bunker Mentality Develops

OTTAWA — At a cocktail party held the other day in Rockliffe Park — the information comes to me second-hand, but is reliable — two Conservative MPs were present.

The event is epochal. By comparison, the recent Gallup poll which showed the Conservatives ahead of the Liberals is merely an interesting but debatable measure of opinion among ordinary, law-abiding, weed-killing Canadians.

The double invitation, you see, breaks all the rules in Rockliffe, which is the place where the mandarins and diplomats roam. Commonly, mandarins invite into their homes, along with the core contingent of other mandarins, cabinet ministers and diplomats, one New Democrat and one Conservative. For the sake of form. (Creditists, by the way, don't count.)

The mandarin is starting to hedge its bets. Senior civil servants, in their delicate and ritualistic way, are signalling their conviction that one political empire is crumbling and that another is about to take its place.

Deep Pessimism

In the East Block command post of the present empire, a certain bunker mentality is developing. The mood there, says a cabinet source, is "not of despair yet, but of deep pessimism."

Since last fall, little, or nothing, has gone right for Prime Minister Trudeau. Some of his troubles are temporary. The spate of scandals, from the Sky Shops affair to the judges affair, will eventually run their course. Certain individuals will be crippled but the government as such will be little harmed. Trudeau still dominates the political consciousness of Canadians. His magic in public is little dimmed, as he showed recently in Toronto.

Plainly, though, Trudeau is suffering a political illness a great deal more serious than the customary mid-term "blahs." The evidence mounts that he may have gone down so far that he can never recover.

Trudeau now is being attacked by three powerful interest groups. By the business community which views Trudeau's "new society" pronouncements as confirmation of its suspicion that he all along has been a closet socialist. By organized labor, which has set its sights as much on defeating Trudeau as on defeating price and income controls. By the media, which have a personal hate affair with him. (The Toronto Sun, which you wouldn't really be happy with any prime minister more progressive than Genghis Khan, recently described Trudeau as "a wounded scorper.")

Speculation that Trudeau might rest his wounds in early retirement seems wholly without foundation.

"He's intensely competitive," says a key aide. "For Trudeau to quit while behind would be totally out of character."

Broadly, a three-phase recovery program is being plotted out for Trudeau: Stage one will be the mid-summer cabinet shuffle. Laurels may be pressed onto the heads of a half-dozen newcomers. Iona Campagnolo from British Columbia, Francis Fox from Quebec, Jim Fleming from Toronto and Cliff McIsaac from Saskatchewan, all are either probable or certain candidates for promotion.

As interesting are some of the other backbench names being mentioned, in the corridors at least, like Ed Lumley from Cornwall and Paul McRae and Jean Jacques Blais, both from northern Ontario, who have the kind of background and personalities that would give the cabinet a more down-to-earth, sympathetic image.

Stage two will unfold in the throne speech at the start of the new session of parliament in the fall. The first batch of "New society" legislation—part two of the Competition Act, revisions to the Bank Act—will be made public then. Other subjects hurried toward the limelight range the gamut from productivity tax incentives, industrial rationalization (through industrial relations national bargaining units and workplace democracy) to food production, land use and the role of marketing boards.

Stage three is the trickiest of all. Inflation will have to be pronounced dead, and the controls program lifted, before the election. The hitch is the certainty of a price and wage explosion the instant the restraints are removed.

Three Tory MPs!

Two options being debated are either to end controls well in advance of the election early in 1978, say so that the public will have forgotten the price and wage increases by the time it gets round to time the end of controls as close as possible to that of the election so that only the first tremors of the eruption will have taken place.

None of this may make any difference. Canadians seem to have decided collectively that "it's time for a change," an issue far more deadly to a government than the future of the market economy, the price of milk or of duty-free liquor or whether inflation really is on its knees or merely crouched down like an Olympic sprinter.

The next time in Rockliffe, press your face to a window pane. Inside you may see, chatting with the mandarins who one day will be advising them on how to get the universe to unfold as it should, not one, not two, but, my God, three Conservative MPs!

Veterans' Story

I know that you register events as they occur, but sometimes newspapers anticipate the wants of the public.

You have published quite a number of distressing letters re the veterans in the ex-memorial hospital, taken over by the Royal Jubilee last year. There are many, many thousands of veterans on Vancouver Island and a report by your newspaper would be much appreciated.—Mrs. R. Hardy, Ex-Vet, Victoria.

Vancouver East

I wish to applaud your Editor's Notebook of April 24 (Invoking the Deity to Win a By-election) and to add my comments.

Over the years we have learned to expect that some political candidates will make irresponsible statements, particularly during an election campaign. We have also learned to treat such statements as garbage. However, Ralph Long, the Sacred candidate in the Vancouver East by-election, made statements after his nomination which cannot be lightly dismissed.

Implying that we could be deprived of our freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom of the enjoyment of life, only one name on the ballot etc., if Dave Barrett and the NDP gained power again in B.C., is to say the least, insidious.

In the light of recent events in and out of the legislature one wonders whether they were his own words or whether they came from the top from where we have heard equally reprehensible utterances.

He will find out on election day that there is more than one name on the ballot. Perhaps at least four if the Liberals and Conservatives are not again intimidated. How can a man so prostitute his (legal) profession? One can only conclude that sinister forces are at work within and behind the Sacred. Why else would they discard common decency and insult the intelligence of the people of B.C., the voters of Vancouver East in particular?

Wouldn't it be refreshing to hear the Sacred leader condemn such disgusting tactics, but of course he won't. We understand that Long received the personal endorsement of the Bennetts. The reflection is quite clear.

We wonder what Long and Co. have to say regarding Dr. Wilder Penfield's views on China and Christianity (Maclean's April 19). — W. Stott, Sooke.

Hello Cowboys

This is in reply to a letter published April 23, by Tom Engel and entitled Good-bye Suckers.

Mr. Engel does not seem to realize that every place has its compensations, the things that make it worthwhile living there. It is generally conceded, Victoria is a relatively expensive place to live. There is not that much work to be had, there is a housing shortage and I personally agree with him that Bennett and his government are a disgrace.

However, wages are generally higher here than they are in Alberta. Also, there are many more unions here and they are far stronger.

I worked for Shell Canada as a laborer last year, 50 miles north of Fort MacMurray in the tar sands for which I was paid $4.60 per hour (non-union). I moved to B.C. where I commenced work as a laborer at $7.98 per hour (union). Even if Mr. Engel's statement, that he could make $600 per week on an oil rig is true (which I strongly suspect it is not) it means he would not be working in Edmonton and would have to commute, probably on a weekly or bi-monthly basis to the drilling site.

When he is home, he will not find flowers growing in March but rather a couple of feet of snow and a temperature of -25°C. He will not find a quiet, easygoing, generally mature and well-reared populace. He will find a city with no soul filled with people who think like cowboys and can do nothing but complain, and cry for the place they had to leave to move to Alberta. Mr. Engel should fit right in though. He appears to have had a fair amount of practice at crying and complaining. — Peter Burgess, Victoria.

Stanley Johnson, 49, no fixed address, was sentenced Tuesday by Judge Harold Alder to six months and the judge said he would recommend the time be served in a detention unit at Alouette River on the B.C. mainland for alcoholics.

Johnson pleaded guilty to a Victoria theft charge which Lang said involved a $74.96 Mincome cheque belonging to an ailing, 64-year-old man. He said the older man told police Johnson came into his room without an invitation and asked for a drink.

When the older man said no liquor was available, said Lang, Johnson "rummaged through drawers," found the cheque and told the owner he would be back with it. Later, said the prosecutor, Johnson tried unsuccessfully at two hotels to cash the cheque, which police found after picking Johnson up for drunkenness.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Randall Edward Johnson, 25, of 2500 Florence Lake Road, escaped a straight 30-day jail term because it might jeopardize his job.

Johnson pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of stealing three eight-track tapes worth a total of $20.91 April 19 at Woolco and Lang said Johnson's record included one conviction each for break-in, theft and possession of stolen property.

After learning Johnson was working, Alder said the sentence was 30 days "but it will be served intermittently on weekends because you are employed."

"Not quite the Easter spirit, was it?" Alder said to James William Buckner, 32, of 352

Moss, who replied, "No, your honor."

Buckner pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft of $1.25 worth of Easter greeting cards on Easter Saturday from the T. Eaton Co. Lang said a store security officer and police chased a suspect through the Empress hotel courtyard, where the cards were dropped.

Alder put Buckner on probation for three months and ordered him to do 30 hours of community-service work.

In the court section of Judge Blake Allan, a sentence of nine months definite and six months indeterminate was imposed on Courtenay resident Frederick Edward Poole, 17, with a recommendation that the time be spent in a youth detention unit.

Poole pleaded guilty April 9 to one charge of possession April 8 in Saanich of a known stolen car and a second charge of using another person's credit card April 8 to obtain $6.80 worth of gasoline at a Victoria service station.

Drink-and-drive fines Tuesday:

Four persons who pleaded guilty to impaired driving in Victoria were Joseph McEwan, 22, of 885 Dunsmuir, stopped Friday and fined $350; Sonja Dorothea Munro, 30, of 89 Sims, April 17 and $400; Paul Thackeray, 62, of 992 George West, April 19 and $350; and Maurice Louis Robitaille, 24, CFB Esquimalt, March 14, $300 and a three-month driving ban.

Roxana Dalziel, 35, of 4655 Lochwood, was found guilty after a trial on a charge of refusing a breath-analysis test in Sidney, Dec. 22, 1975, and fined $200.

Correctional Centre Director Asks to Meet Critical Judge

An invitation to discuss the aims and methods of the federal community correctional centre at 921 Pandora is being issued to provincial court Judge Blake Allan by Gamaliel Milner, director of the centre.

Milner's move was in response to searing criticism of the centre made in court Monday by Judge Allan after it was disclosed that Dennis Warren Smith had skipped from the centre to rob a bank.

Milner said Tuesday that Smith was the first inmate ever to run out on the first day of a pre-assessment program and he added a summary of how Smith came to the centre in the first place.

Smith, 27, was sentenced Monday by Judge Blake Allan to 15 years and eight months for being unlawfully at large from the centre at 10:45 a.m. last Thursday and staging a $2,800 holdup at the Toronto-Dominion Bank in the Fairfield shopping centre half an hour later.

Considering the time Smith has left from robbery and escaping sentences in 1971, 1972 and 1973, Allan's sentence meant an added term of about nine years — changing Smith's release year to 1992 from 1983.

No one was in court to provide a detailed explanation of the centre when Allan asked for one. A policeman testifying about Smith's crimes said only that it was "a transitional house" where federal inmates are prepared for "a return to the mainstream of society."

That's true, said Milner, but there is more to it than that and he has had private talks with all Victoria provincial court judges in the 3½ years since he opened the centre except Allan, who was appointed to Victoria from Nelson last fall.

Drink Mislabeled

WINNIPEG (CP) — A Winnipeg, drug company that inadvertently sold methyl alcohol as isopropyl — or rubbing — alcohol to three Kenora, Ont., residents who died last November, was fined $1,200 Monday.

The director said some inmates at William Head, the only major federal institution in Greater Victoria, have community sponsors who help during the transitional stage. Smith was one of the inmates without a sponsor.

The centre provides transitional aid only for the sponsorless, "who are very carefully assessed before they are allowed to do this," he said.

First, a classification officer at William Head considers whether it is time for an inmate to enter the transitional stage. Next, his recommendation goes to a Temporary Absence board at William Head for review. The board includes a federal parole service representative.

Finally, the board's recommendation comes to the centre which can check William Head files before accepting the inmate. Milner said the pre-assessment program has been in effect for about 18 months and the centre has accepted about 20 inmates while refusing "not more than three or four."

The first day of pre-assessment is "social orientation" in which the inmate and a counsellor at 921 Pandora drive around Victoria so the inmate can see the area and, most important, stop at Manpower and other places to discuss possible jobs.

The day lasts from 9 a.m. arrival at 921 Pandora to a 4 p.m. return to William Head.

Smith, who had been in jail or prison without approved release since early 1971, arrived about 9 a.m. Paperwork took some time and counsellor and Smith were ready to leave about 10:45.

The counsellor had to get a car and Smith received permission to go across the street to a take-out restaurant at 980 Pandora for a soft drink and meet the officer in the centre parking lot in about five minutes.

After waiting at the car for about five minutes, the counsellor went to the restaurant and immediately reported to the centre that Smith was nowhere in sight. Smith was not arrested until the next morning, in a residence about one block away.

Milner said no disciplinary action had been taken (or would be taken) against the counsellor or any other person.

He repeated no one had vanished before during the first pre-assessment day but added, "If they're going to do it, they'll do it."

In court Monday, Allan said that "I suppose it's dangerous to criticize what someone else does without having all the facts" but it seemed "a shocking situation ... that other people are given powers which sometimes seem to be not carefully enough used."

White House Foul-Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House mistakenly announced the resignation of the American ambassador to Zambia just as State Secretary Henry Kissinger flew into that country during his current African trip, officials said today.

State department officials said the situation "was a screw up" and had nothing to do with the secretary's visit to Zambia.

They say Ambassador Jean Wilkowski, 56, is being considered for a new assignment after serving in Lusaka for more than three years.

The paperwork simply got out of phase, the officials said, resulting in the White House making an announcement Monday that she was resigning.

She will remain in Zambia for at least another month or two, the officials said. Her new assignment has not been decided and she will continue to serve in Zambia until her new post is settled.

When asked if this was a case of the left hand not knowing what the right hand was doing, one ranking official answered "exactly."

Kissinger was said to be stunned when he was greeted in Zambia with news accounts of the Wilkowski reassessment.

U.S. Arms for North Yemen

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Ford Administration has told Congress of plans to sell $130 million in arms to North Yemen to inaugurate an American-Saudi-Yemeni relationship intended to oust Soviet equipment and advisers.

The U.S. equipment, to be paid for by Saudi Arabia, is intended to modernize several infantry brigades of the most-loyal Yemeni army. It has been equipped with Soviet weapons and assisted by Soviet military advisers for two decades.

The proposed sale, which is evidently only the first of several which are planned, is said to include howitzers, trucks and Vulcan anti-aircraft guns.

The Yemen Arab Republic (as Northern Yemen is officially known) has taken an increasingly independent policy in recent years, particularly since Col. Ibrahim el Hamdi came to power in mid-1974.

The trend away from Soviet influence has been encouraged by its neighbor Saudi Arabia, which has far more money and international power but a smaller population than North Yemen.

Soviet and Cuban military advisers, Soviet political advisers and East German police advisers are reported at work in the South. The Southern Yemen armed forces are reported to have more modern Soviet equipment than that supplied to the Northern regime.

U.S. and Saudi plans to take over the Northern Yemen arms supply go back at least to the fall of 1974, when a Yemeni shopping list for new weapons was turned over by Saudi Arabia to the United States. The Pentagon then sent a team to study the country's needs.

When the U.S.-Saudi deal seemed to bog down, a ranking Yemeni officer went to Moscow to discuss new Soviet weapons.

Moscow reportedly offered MIG-21 jet fighters and T-34 tanks to replace Northern Yemen's MIG-17s and T-34s. Late this March, a Soviet ship reportedly docked at the Yemeni port of Hodeidah carrying big crates prominently marked "MIG-21." No arms deal was reached — a higher level Pentagon team had just visited the country to discuss American weapons — and the ship departed with crates still unopened.

BUTTERFLIES THREATENED

WASHINGTON (UPD) — Two Florida butterflies called "living jewels" are the first insects on the government's list of threatened species.

Keith Schreiner of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said the butterflies — which have beautiful yellow, orange, blue and brown patterns on their four-inch wings — are much sought after by collectors and reportedly sell for as much as $25 apiece.

He said there is some concern among biologists that unregulated collection of the butterflies in caterpillar stage has contributed to their declining population.

Skippy Dipping.

The greatest thing since sliced bread.

Skippy Peanut Butter is making avid Skippy Dippers of Canadians everywhere.

And just one dip of smooth, incredibly delicious Skippy will tell you why.

Skippy is made from only the best parts of the best peanuts, and the skins and nibs are removed so only the real peanut taste comes through, dip after dip.

Discover the best peanut butter flavour around – on bread, or by the dipperful.

Because Skippy Dipping with Skippy Peanut Butter really is the greatest thing since sliced bread.

Creamy or Super Chunk.

Best Foods
Living up to our name.

A small but dedicated group broke into applause on Parliament Hill today as the Chairman of the Committee for the Popularization of Skippy Dipping.

proclaimed 1976 National Skippy Dipping Year. It was a remarkable scene. Once again, Skippy Dipping is proving to be the greatest thing since sliced bread.

Skippy Dipping now legal

After careful study and much closed-door debating, a bill was passed last night that legalizes the practice of Skippy Dipping with Skippy Peanut Butter. The move came after a special committee, established to study the matter, found Skippy Dipping to be entirely harmless and in fact, quite pleasurable. Following the passing of the bill, several committee members were seen "dipping" for reporters with jars of Skippy and bread dippers fashioned from bits of memo paper. (See photo above).

The ranks of Skippy Dippers have been swelling rapidly everywhere, as more and more people discover the creamy smooth peanut taste of Skippy Peanut Butter. Its popularity seems to lie in the fact that Skippy is made from only the best parts of the best peanuts after all skins and nibs have been removed.

Meanwhile, politicians in some ridings fear that Skippy Dipping, last becoming a national pastime rather than simply a fad, may eventually cause work slowdowns and, if left unchecked, a possible economic crisis.

With a mouth and spoon in hand, Waldo "Big Dipper" Watkins, foremost proponent of Skippy Dipping put these fears to rest by telling reporters, "Mmmphterglump nurg npterbfiderrpSkippyleebenrumpmar iridrogible". The startled newsmen left soon after the interview, many of them wiping what looked like peanut butter from microphones and note pads.

Another area of concern facing the government and some special leaders is the surfacing of "hard-core" Skippy Dippers who find themselves indulging now in an entirely legal pastime. Shades have been thrown up in Skippy dens and peanut palaces everywhere, and slogans such as "brown is beautiful" and "Marmalade stunts your growth" have sprung up on large banners in many downtown areas.

Whether or not these Skippy Freaks will be a boon or a bother is under careful study and the matter is likely to be the chief topic of discussion at the upcoming Peanut Butter Federation meetings in Calgary next month.

Hours after the announcement of the legalization of Skippy Dipping, the nation is holding its peanut butter scented breath, awaiting some indication of what is to follow. A spokesman for the Brambleberry Federation of Canada has stated that the reports of Federation members leaving for the ranks of Skippy Dipping are totally untrue, despite the fact that a high ranking member of the Brambleberry Federation had been found with a Skippy Dipper concealed in his executive socks. These disclosures may point to a possible struggle for spread supremacy, but, like the rest of the nation, we'll just have to wait and see what happens.

PROVINCES AGREE ON NATIONAL SKIPPY DIPPING YEAR

Reactions by Provincial leaders to the announcement of National Skippy Year have so far been very favourable. The overwhelming public support of the now legal "Skippy Dipping" gave rise to the suggestion that the pastime should in some way be recognized on a national level. As one organizer remarked, "This is only the beginning. We're very excited about our year."

The Skippy Peanut Butter craze was born when it was discovered that Skippy is so creamy that it won't stick to the roof of your mouth and so smooth that it won't tear bread when you spread it. The well-known phrase "Skippy Dipping" came into being when people everywhere began carrying jars of Skippy Peanut Butter, sampling it frequently straight from the jar with oddly shaped dippers.

The opening day of the first annual Skippy Dipping year will be marked by a Skippy parade complete with floats and marching bands.

Leader of the newly formed National Union of True Skippy Dippers (N.U.T.S.) Waldo "Big Dipper" Watkins said that the main attraction will be a float featuring "a man with a very large dipper shoveling little peanut models into a mechanical mouth."

Among other festivities planned for National Skippy Dipping year are community demonstrations of the art, a Dip-athon on local TV and a Dipping contest to the music of "Skippy to the loo my darling". Other events will be listed in current TV magazines, and we'll keep you up to date on "Skippy Year" happenings.

Teachers say Skippy Dipping behind wave of absenteeism

Educators on all levels have condemned Skippy Dipping as the scourge of the educational system. Teachers claim that more and more students are cutting classes to go Skippy Dipping with Skippy Peanut Butter in parking lots, locker areas and washrooms, and that valuable class time is being lost as a result.

A spokesperson for the teachers says that legalization of Skippy Dipping was irresponsible and that the committee behind the legalization should be given a slap on the wrist and told to stand in the corner.

Waldo "Big Dipper" Watkins, President elect of the National Union of True Skippy Dippers (N.U.T.S.) said today that Skippy Dipping should not be enjoyed at any one time, but at all times. He continued to say that no restrictions should be placed on when or where Skippy Dipping should take place. He also mentioned that no one should slander a peanut butter that is so creamy, smooth and economical.

This morning, the principal of a large urban high school was caught Skippy Dipping by his students. The discovery has dealt a devastating blow to the teacher's stand against Skippy Dipping.

People everywhere, mostly non-dippers, have been wondering how a jar of peanut butter could cause such turmoil. One enthusiast says that the reason is Skippy's undying devotion to smoothness and taste, but whatever the reason, the craze continues.

The question of Skippy Dipping related absenteeism will be discussed further at Home and School meetings next month.

Skippy Dipping defined

For everyone interested in the current Dipping Craze, here's how the dictionary defines Skippy Dipping:

Skippy Dipping (ski-ppy di-pping) n. the art of extracting a special substance made from peanuts from a glass container, the extraction being accomplished with the aid of an instrument known as a skippy dipper. The practice has gained much flavour in the Western Hemisphere in recent years. n. skippy dipper. Also a small animal native to the equatorial rain forests of South America and part of Borneo.

Don "Mumble Mouth" McDonnell breaks record.

Skippy Dipper makes Goodness Book of Records

The recent wave of Skippy Dippers has been named in the Goodness Book of Records, the world authority on record-breaking food feats.

Don "Mumble Mouth" McDonnell broke the peanut butter eating record with an outstanding performance during which he ate six cases of Skippy Peanut Butter in a period of 9 hours, 27 minutes and 34 seconds.

Mr. McDonnell broke the record held previously by 8 yr. old Timmy Wiggins who managed to consume 5 cases of another brand in 10 hours, 48 minutes, 17 seconds.

Mr. McDonnell, in breaking the Wiggins record said, "I knew I could do it with Skippy because it is so smooth. It must be because Skippy is made from only the best parts of the best peanuts, after all the skins and nibs are removed. It's a great source of protein too. Thank you Skippy!"

The record holder is now to be included in the Goodness Book along with such greats as Mabel Renshaw, the woman who ate a telephone while playing Green Sleeves on a spatula and George Arnold who ate an office building between 1963 and 1971 in an apparent display of distaste for management.

In recognition of his accomplishments Mr. McDonnell will receive the Golden Skippy Dipper Award and four cartons of antacid tablets.

"Super Chunk" comic books in works.

Those of us who remember drug store comic book heroes like Superman, Captain Magnificent and Wonder Boy will have no trouble whatsoever believing that now there is a new nemesis of evil-doers stalking the shelves.

Marvin Shlep, a Toronto comic book illustrator has created a new hero by the name of Super Chunk, and the first colour edition of Super Chunk comics will be hitting wire racks next month.

In an interview earlier this week Mr. Shlep explained that he got the idea for his new character while strolling in his neighbourhood grocery store. A jar of Skippy Super Chunk caught his eye and it was love at first dip. From that point on the character more or less created itself.

Super Chunk is the new peanut butter from the makers of Skippy (Skippy Dipping) Peanut Butter. As in the case of Skippy smooth peanut butter, Super Chunk contains only the best parts of the best peanuts, for the best tasting peanut flavour around.

In another interview taped yesterday, Marvin Shlep said, "Who made the rule that all comic book heroes had to be human or near-human? Super Chunk, by his very nature, fills the need for a non-human crime-buster."

For anyone who simply can't wait, in the first month's edition of Super Chunk comics our hero will take on the Marmalade Monster from Planet Zero and the Jam Fiend that gave Moose Jaw sticky fingers. Super Chunk lives in a Skippy Peanut Butter jar on the shelf of your friendly neighbourhood food store and hops down from on high whenever evil needs conquering. Naturally, like his smooth counterpart, Skippy Dipping with Super Chunk is the greatest thing since sliced bread. But this reporter feels that maybe his motto should be, "It's a bird, it's a plane... no, it's Super Chunk."

Well anyway, that's the way it goes in the comics.

U.N. to study possible benefits to world health

In a meeting at the U.N. today, usually cautious representatives from the underprivileged countries praised Skippy Dipping and called it "The answer to the problems of a hungry world."

Other countries agreed, stating that the world would be a better place to live if Skippy Peanut Butter was more widespread.

Scientists have discovered that certain nutritive properties of Skippy Peanut Butter can be extremely beneficial when taken on a regular basis. Skippy Peanut Butter is an excellent source of protein, and because of Skippy's delicious creamy smooth taste people all over the world would rapidly accept it.

Earlier, a representative from Skippy Peanut Butter was offered a trade deal with the USSR involving the export of a large quantity of Skippy and several tons of -dippers. Details were not given, however the member from Russia said that his people would be most agreeable to Skippy Dipping and stated his surprise that it had not been a Russian who first discovered Skippy Dipping as was the case with hockey and basketball.

Further discussion on the subject is expected to take place tomorrow morning.

"Son... It's about time I told you about Skippy Dipping."

INDIANS TO REBUILD RAZED HALL

Members of the Pauquachin Indian Reserve in North Saanich decided Tuesday to rebuild their communal hall destroyed by fire Sunday.

Band chief Norman Williams said today the council will use the $50,000 fire-insurance it had on the building to erect a shell. The rest will be completed by volunteer labor drawn from the four Indian bands on the peninsula.

The hall, only three years old, was destroyed by fire of unknown cause. It had been built at a cost of $30,000 with 75 per cent of the funds coming from the federal Local Initiatives Program and the provincial First Citizen's Fund.

Pledge On Coal

VANCOUVER — (CP) — The British Columbia government has given assurances that a proposed $200 million coal development project at Cabin Creek will not go ahead without full consultation with all interested parties, a spokesman for a Montana environmental organization said Tuesday.

Lex Blood, of Kalispell, Mont., told a public meeting of the Sierra Club in Vancouver that official lines of communication for an exchange of technical data were established at a March meeting in Ottawa of state, provincial and federal representatives.

Rio, Algom Ltd. has spent several million dollars on exploration and feasibility studies of a possible strip mine site at Cabin Creek, only eight miles north of the B.C.-Montana border.

The project in the East Kootenays concerns thousands of Montanans who fear that coal effluent will flow down the Flathead River and across the border to foul up a famous recreation area.

"We have been told that real progress took place at the Ottawa meeting and that the B.C. government gave assurances that no action would be taken regarding development without consultation," said Blood, a community college teacher who is a graduate geologist and mining engineer.

COPA Chief Again

Betty Wadsworth, 3035 Oliver, has been named to her third term as B.C. representative of Canadian Owners and Pilots Association.

Active in aviation groups for the last 20 years, Mrs. Wadsworth is air chief for the Victoria zone of the Provincial Emergency Program. She has received four major awards for service to Canadian aviation.

COPA, the world's second largest private owners association, has more than 12,000 members, of which more than 1,400 are in B.C.

Conflict of Interest In Lease to Sacred?

The possibility of a conflict of interest in granting a foreshore lease to a Social Credit party supporter was raised by an NDP member in the legislature Monday.

Mackenzie MLA Don Lockstead asked Environment Minister Jim Nielsen to investigate the possibility of a conflict in granting a foreshore lease to Halfmoon Bay Estates Ltd. for development of a marina at Porpoise Bay near Sechart.

Company principal Len Van Egmont is a Social Credit supporter and his wife is president of the local Social Credit constituency association, said Lockstead.

The provincial fish and wildlife branch, federal fisheries and a department of lands study all recommended against the lease, he said later outside the house, but the grant was given March 25. Nielsen told the legislature he would investigate the matter but assured members that "if the application was from the premier he wouldn't get any more consideration than anyone else."

The minister said today a report had been prepared on the situation and he was expecting to make a statement to the house later in the day. The Sechart village council originally objected to the marina as well, said Lockstead, but changed its mind later "when at least one councillor opposed to the development was out of town."

"I'm not suggesting there is or there isn't a conflict of interest," he said. "I'm just saying the thing should be looked into." Sechart village clerk Tom

Wood said he was not aware of any conflict of interest or any political considerations being involved.

He said the village's position with the marina was complicated by a new zoning bylaw put through last spring.

Although there was a great deal of public opposition to the development, said Wood, council realized it couldn't prohibit the marina without prohibiting any moorage in the area, since the development only involved moorage of boats with no additional facilities.

Council first decided to agree to the marina if it did not extend more than 115 feet beyond the shoreline but then realized, said Wood, that at certain places in the bay it was still too shallow at 115 feet.

"So finally we had to say the marina did not conflict with our zoning bylaw," he said.

Wood agreed that one member of council was still opposed to the marina but the other four believed that, according to the bylaw, they could not object to the development.

'Benefit of Doubt' In Bomb Scare

COURTENAY — A Campbell River man who, when boarding a Pacific Western Airlines plane here Jan. 15, asked a stewardess to "take care of my bomb," has been acquitted of a charge of public mischief by Judge Alfred Scow.

Gordon Albert Grigg, 35, told the court he always referred to his camera as "my bomb."

He was taken off the PWA aircraft by military policemen from the nearby Armed Forces Base at Comox, after a stewardess had alerted the plane's pilot.

Joan Tremblay of Vancouver, testified she was greeting passengers on the evening flight from Comox to Vancouver when Grigg who she said, seemed intoxicated, handed her a bag which, he said, contained a bomb.

Grigg told the court he always referred to his camera as "my bomb."

Dismissing the charge, Scow said there was a reasonable doubt.

MAN KILLED

NANAIMO — A 24-year-old city man, William Andrew John Vickers, 24, of 1080 Woodlands Road, died Monday when his car went out of control on a district road.

Police said they were informed early Tuesday morning that a car was in the ditch on the Nanaimo Lakes Road, about two miles beyond the city's southwest boundary.

Upon investigation, they found the body of the man in the car. Further investigation showed that the vehicle apparently skidded on the gravel road.

Esquimalt Turns Down Williams' Lot Split Plan

Esquimalt council has rejected a subdivision proposal by former resources minister Bob Williams for the waterfront property on Plaskett Place.

The proposal to subdivide the panhandle parcel of land into two lots failed to win the necessary two thirds majority and council voted against it 5 to 2.

Vote came after T. J. Halbert, spokesman for neighboring property owners, said the subdivision would destroy the neighborhood. A petition against the development signed by 12 property owners in the area was also received by council.

Williams, a town planner, told council that panhandle lots like the Plaskett Place property were "a reasonable solution to some definite problems" related to Greater Victoria landscape.

"The precedent for subdivided lots seems to be there both in the immediate area and the municipality," he said.

Rights Denied

Five senior judges upheld a government claim that presidential orders issued since the emergency effectively quashed all rights to personal liberty.

Spanish King, Premier Battling

Washington Post
MADRID — King Juan Carlos I is fighting a crucial behind-the-scenes battle against Premier Carlos Arias over the government's snail-paced schedule for moving Spain from a totalitarian rightist regime to a representative democratic monarchy, according to government officials familiar with the struggle.

Of immediate concern to the 37-year-old monarch, in power only five months, is his scheduled June trip to the United States for the Bicentennial celebration.

He hopes that the U.S. Senate will ratify the new bilateral defense treaty before the visit, the first ever by a Spanish king.

While in Washington he had expected to declare in an address to a joint session of Congress that the monarchy was liquidating the dictatorship left behind by General Franco and returning "sovereignty to the Spanish people," sources said.

But the premier's "foot-dragging" tactics and compromises with rightist officials and generals have become a major obstacle to the king's intention to project the "image of a new Spain" not only abroad but at home, officials explained.

Juan Carlos has been manoeuvring for days to force Arias to resign, officials said.

But the king has been warned that it would be impossible to appoint a more liberal premier because the Council of the Realm, created by Franco to approve candidates for the premiership, is dominated by the right.

Faced with similar opposition last fall after mounting the throne, the king retained Arias, who was appointed by Franco in 1974 to a five-year term, in the powerful premiership.

The 67-year-old premier, a former secret police chief and interior minister, was scheduled to announce a referendum on two constitutional amendments over television today.

One affects the succession to the throne, the other will create a bi-cameral legislature with a directly elected lower house, according to officials.

Sewage-Flooded Ditch Blamed for Sick Children

Raw sewage flowing into a ditch in one of Saanich's low-lying areas is threatening the health of residents but Saanich council says there's no fast solution.

Residents of Knibbs Road Tuesday asked for help from council's public works committee.

Saying she dreaded the summer and what might happen, Mrs. Mary Beaumont asked:

"How long do we have to live with smells, bugs and health threats?"

She quoted from a letter written by the medical health officer (Dr. Allan Arneil) on Oct. 29, 1975, in which Arneil said: "Sewers are the only solution to the problem. We can't allow this situation to continue much longer."

"It's a serious situation," conceded chairman Ald. Sandy Noel. "We had hoped and figured the Dunhill Development's Royal Road housing project would have been long started before this."

Mrs. Beaumont and other Knibbs Road residents were informed design of a trunk sewer, which would also serve their area, cannot be completed until council decides what density will be allowed in the Roy Road complex.

Mayor Ed Lum said, "The size of the trunk doesn't hinge on Dunhill alone... it depends on the (density of) whole area."

Mrs. Beaumont told the committee two families were so alarmed about the potential health hazard they are moving away.

She said later that her two sons, Timmy and Bobby, have been sick repeatedly and that a neighbor's son had "almost died with convulsions."

CONSTRUCTION MEN WALK OFF THE JOB

MADRID (UPI) — Thousands of Spanish construction workers struck today in the first of a series of stoppages called by underground left-wing groups to mark May Day.

Labor sources said "many thousands" of construction workers walked off their jobs in Madrid, and additional thousands in the provinces.

The government-controlled labor organization said the number of striking construction workers in Madrid totalled 3,500 at noontime.

Madrid bus drivers also appeared to be following a call for a slowdown, although a spokesman for the municipal bus company said everything was "normal."

The interior ministry warned Spaniards not to heed the calls by left-wing underground groups for strikes and street demonstrations scheduled to start today and to culminate on May Day.

"The Interior Ministry appeals to the good sense of all citizens asking them to ignore the calls for participation in disorders," the statement said.

Left-wing groups have called for strikes, protests and street demonstrations to press for democratic freedoms and workers' rights.

For May Day, underground socialist and communist labor unions are planning a mass rally in Madrid's Casa de Campo park.

Everyone Giving It a Bash!

Try it! That's the advice you get the moment you walk into the Oak Bay Recreation Centre. It's all around you, printed on signs and posters, and dashing here, there and everywhere are recreation assistants, wearing white T-shirts with Try It and Essaie-Le emblazoned on the back. It is, of course, the federal government's Sports Caravan, which has travelled more than 50,000 miles and presented about 80 exhibitions across the country since taking to the road in 1972. And it's on its first visit to Victoria.

Despite the hordes of school children, all either busy trying it or lining up for a bash, as well as scores of teachers and parents and others who just popped in when the show opened Tuesday afternoon, it wasn't too difficult to find George Festeryga, described by one of his assistants as "the Carnival Boss."

George, a slightly more portly version of Yul Brynner, is officially the Sports Demonstration Program Manager and he travels with three assistants and a heap of equipment in a giant van.

"We pick up somewhere between 25 and 35 people locally, depending on the size of the place," explains George. "We pay them to set it up, babysit it, and take it down."

"The whole concept is to get local clubs involved," he says. "We try to get badminton clubs, golf clubs and tennis clubs, for example, to have people come down and pitch in and demonstrate their game and try to get people interested in it."

George looks around at the crowds of youngsters at the various sports booths in the centre's curling hall and spilling out on to the Oak Bay Junior High School playing field next door and he grins.

"There are a lot of kids here — we're scheduling 200 an hour and they're being bused in from all the schools around," he says. "The teachers bring their PE classes and for them it's a field day."

And what about the adults? George, their excuse is "oh well, we'll let the kids do it." "But we figure they'll come and give it a try in the evenings when the kids aren't around."

Well, they were around all

right Tuesday afternoon — and "try it" they certainly did.

There were lineups at just about everything, particularly the archery and rifle shooting stalls and the ping pong and tennis displays where you get a chance to hit back at a machine firing the balls out.

Films of skiing and an imitation ski slope where you can try out your skills on a pair of short skis were popular, there was a good crowd waiting to don skates and try out the artificial silicone ice surface and eight youngsters battled away in a sort of double-doubles on one badminton court. — Outside on the grass there are soccer, baseball, hockey and golf stalls, among others, as well as the Canada Fitness Award Program for youngsters aged seven to 17 going on.

Some of the athletic styles leave a little to be desired. A boy attacks the balls being hurled out of the tennis machine with a swing that would make Hank Aaron envious.

And a gorgeous-looking girl stops in mid-air while trying to shoot the puck, tries to decide whether to smash my camera with the hockey stick and then drops it and runs off with her hands over her face.

A lot of the sports — there are said to be 66 displayed — are new to many people. But Canadians are trying them and this is the whole idea: to try each sport with the hope of finding one or more that you can do and like and that hopefully you will use to keep fit.

Sports Caravan may not take you very deeply into any one sport. It merely gives you a lick of the icing on the cake. But for many it can be the start down the road to physical improvement. And, even if it isn't the start to anything, then it's fun.

Two little boys, struggling to pull themselves up to eye level on a bar, agree.

"Yeah, it's pretty good, alright," confirms Gary Johal.

"The whole place is fun," adds his wide-eyed friend Gerald Thomas.

When it leaves Victoria, Sports Caravan goes to Nanaimo, Courtenay and then to the Interior. But until then, it will be going in Oak Bay from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. each day until Saturday night.

Try it!

City Police Jail Cells Don't Bar Inflation

Members of the Victoria police board agreed today that the city of Victoria should not have to subsidize accommodation costs for prisoners from other jurisdictions who occupy the city police cells.

The board instructed city comptroller Mason Sheldrick to inform the provincial government, neighboring municipalities and other agencies that the city will be increasing its prisoner day rate from $5 to $10.

Police Chief Jack Gregory pointed out that at present meals alone cost $6.15 a day for each prisoner.

Last year, he said, his department supplied 2,746 meals to the city's own prisoners, and 4,083 to those who were the responsibility of other jurisdictions.

The catering breakdown for chargeable meals was the provincial government, 372; Saanich, 184; Central Saanich, 11; Oak Bay, 33; Esquimalt, 138; RCMP, 540; and "other" (including such agencies as the Immigration department), 59.

Actual cost to Victoria for providing all meals in the cells last year was $17,654, and the 1976 budgeted figure is $19,400.

The board also decided that the city should bill for the cost of employing a jail matron on a part-time, call-in basis, when cells are occupied by female prisoners from outside the city.

'FRIED' FOR SCHOOL TAXES

'Embarrassing' 27.5%

Greater Victoria school board approved a 27½ per cent increase in education taxes for district residents Tuesday with the proviso that a $2.3 million cutback in spending be discussed next year.

"It's an embarrassment to us all," said Trustee Janet Baird, "but I think we've genuinely tried (to keep the increase down) and we've been fried for it."

Trustee Peter Bunn, decrying the fact that school board spending across the province is out of control, said it is too late to pare the district's budget because "we're three months into the budget already."

"There's no way we can chop any meaningful way without doing great damage," he urged the board to make a solid decision on how much the taxpayers can stand next year and suggested the board operate on the premise that, for example, the budget would only increase 8 per cent next year.

But trustees opted instead to approve in principle a notion that the board accept that the number of students per teacher be increased by 1 (a saving of 97½ teachers) or the equivalent saving of $2.3 million, by September, 1977.

Bunn admitted after the meeting that the class size would likely be increased, "if the board in 1977 follows through with the intent of the motion."

Trustee Susan Brice consistently spoke against the motion, saying she thinks the board will find that the $2.3 million figure "might be small potatoes" in 1977.

"I agree," said Dr. Fisher, "but at least it opens a crack in the door" to spending cutbacks.

All trustees complained they were frustrated with the education financing system, controlled by the provincial government.

Under the old rules, the budget increase would have been only 13.5 per cent for the taxpayers to fund, but then the Social Credit government changed the formula.

And, Ross said, that loaded an extra burden of 6 mills (3.2 million) directly on the taxpayer.

After lengthy discussion the board approved the bylaw which will allow them to set the mill rate and levy taxes. The budget, including capital expenses, Camosun College and the operating expenses, works out to a total of $50,639,805, and $28,970,998 will be raised by local taxation.

Burnaby Woman Charged

Coquitlam RCMP said today a Burnaby woman has been charged with criminal negligence in connection with the death of former Victoria high school star athlete Rick Jones earlier this month.

A police spokesman said Jennie Grams, 29, faces one charge of criminal negligence causing death, another of negligence causing bodily harm, both resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle in a two-car collision in Coquitlam March 26.

Jones died April 2 from injuries he received in the mishap. A passenger in his car, Denise Holst, 18, was seriously injured and is permanently paralysed from the neck down.

Mrs. Grams escaped with minor injuries. Miss Holst was a Pan-American Games gymnast and had been expected to be on the Canadian Olympic team.

A Ten Mile Point resident told Saanich's public works committee Tuesday she's starting a one-woman campaign to get Tudor Hill residents to help to make Tudor Hill Road safer for pedestrians and cyclists.

Mrs. Anna Foster of 3040 Baynes Road told the committee she had petitioned for a bicycle path two years ago, gathering 70 signatures.

"Tudor Road carries the traffic of all the hinterland. It's an extremely dangerous road with hardly any visibility. The answer will be to have a bicycle path," she said.

Reminding aldermen the first petition for a path was presented four years ago, Mrs. Foster said, "We've come to the point we are pleading with you to do something about the danger on Ten Mile Point."

Her husband, J. Bristol

passage of the board's $2.75 mill rate, are:

—$14,129,475 from Victoria; —$9,194,612 from Saanich; —$3,146,966 from Oak Bay; —$1,897,154 from Esquimalt; —$601,891 from rural areas.

Earlier Tuesday Victoria city council had given preliminary approval to its 1976 budget, which will entail a 5.08-mill increase in the city's mill rate.

But the city acts as tax collector for the school district, and the school mill rate increase of 11.39 mills added to the city's, plus higher levies for regional district, hospital and assessment purposes, produces an over-all mill rate increase this year of 16.17 mills.

In dollar terms this translates to an average increase of about 17.5 per cent for the city taxpayer.

City comptroller Mason Sheldrick gave these examples of typical tax bill hikes on varying levels of assessment:

Assessment $4,000: taxes paid in 1975, $360; payable this year, $425 (an increase of 85).

Assessment $7,000: taxes paid in 1975, $629; payable this year, $743 (114).

Ten-Mile Point Woman To Fight for Bike Path

Foster, added, "It's particularly dangerous in the winter when children are returning from school. I've got so close to hitting children it's had me scared..." It probably won't become a priority until a child gets killed.

Ald. Fred Severson took exception to Foster's last remark, saying it was attention-getting but unfair.

"This problem is an over-all one in Saanich," Severson said, "Would the residents agree to a Local Initiatives Program (to provide a sidewalk)?"

Mrs. Foster said she would campaign for a dirt path to be financed under an LIP agreement, with residents paying a share of the costs.

Chairman Ald. Sandy Noel pointed out that some Ten Mile Point residents had extended their properties, landscaping them out to the edge of the road. These people, he said, might not be in favor of giving up their landscaping for a path.

"Leave those people to me. I will fight with them. They are not many," replied Mrs. Foster.

"The good majority of people along there want a sidewalk," Noel concurred.

The area will be studied by council when it takes a fact-finding tour on public works requirements on Friday, May 14.

A Call on the Mayor By Lucky Dog Susie

By PAT DUFOUR Times Staff

Susie is one of the lucky ones.

Susie is still with Mrs. Lynn. The others have been adopted.

Be Kind to Animals Week begins on Sunday and today Susie went to City Hall with her mistress to hear Mayor Mike Young make the official proclamation.

Also on hand were Don Adams, manager of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and Val Gislason of the Association for Prevention of Cruelty to Fur-Bearing Animals, an organization committed to the banning of leg-hold traps.

Mrs. Lynn's group is dedicated to educating the public to the need for spaying and neutering clinics and she has just returned from Los Angeles where three are in operation.

She said that since the clinics were started 21 per cent fewer abandoned animals have been picked-up and 23 per cent fewer have had to be killed.

Susie looks at her mistress with trust as Mrs. Lynn contrasts the situation in Canada where "250,000 animals have had to be destroyed in one year..." and that's not counting those that have been abandoned or found dead on city streets.

Mrs. Lynn says statistics prove that only 25 per cent of animals taken to animal shelters find new homes. The rest must die.

The fate of animals dumped alongside the road or left behind when their owners move is worse.

Many starve to death slowly. Thousands are killed by cars or left to die a slow painful death. Some are so badly injured they die from gangrene or loss of blood.

Mrs. Lynn's group has been trying to persuade local politicians of the need for clinics to cut down the overpopulation that leads to such tragedies.

Susie's trip to City Hall could be the turning point the group's been waiting to reach.

Youthful 'Santa' in EMI

An 18-year-old youth who had so little faith in the monetary system he gave dollars to all takers in downtown Victoria is in Eric Martin Institute today undergoing "assessment."

The youth was arrested Monday after two Saanich detectives spotted him in the 700-block Fort giving $1 bills to passersby.

Police said the youth, a recent arrival from Eastern Canada, cashed $300 in travellers cheques into $1 bills earlier in the day. He then gave the bills away, plucking them out of a plastic box, one to a customer, saying God had commanded him to do so and that his actions would generate "good Karma."

By the time police arrived he had gone through $245 of his bundle. As the officers approached he threw the box into the air and the remaining $35 scattered to the street.

Bystanders helped the officers retrieve the money.

The youth submitted without struggle and as he was being taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital told officers he felt the dollar system was on the point of collapse, that he wanted no part of it and that henceforth he would "live off the fruits of the land."

A police spokesman said there was nothing illegal about giving money away. But, he added, police are empowered under Section 27 of the Mental Health Act to arrest anyone whom they feel is not capable of looking after himself and deliver him to a hospital for treatment.

A spokesman for EMI said a person admitted under the Mental Act is kept 72 hours for assessment. After that time he may be discharged or held for a longer period as a voluntary or involuntary patient. There is no time limit, but the case is reviewed each month.

STRANGERS aren't welcome is the message delivered to Montreal's Bob Gainey by Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders in opening game of National Hockey League semi-final series at Montreal, Tuesday night. Underneath Gainey is Islanders' goalkeeper Bill Smith. Canadiens won 3-2.

Habs Lead Rally to Edge Islanders in Tight Battle

MONTREAL (CP) — The opening game of the New York Islanders-Montreal Canadiens National Hockey League Stanley Cup semi-final playoff was more or less what everybody expected—a low-scoring, tight-checking affair.

And those following the best-of-seven set can expect more of the same as the series progresses.

The Canadiens edged the Islanders 3-2, coming from behind with goals by Larry Robinson and Yvan Cournoyer 81 seconds apart in the third period. Steve Shutt scored the other Montreal goal in the second period with Eddie Westfall and Bill MacMillan scoring for the Islanders.

"We know how the Islanders play and we expected a tough game from them tonight," said Canadiens coach Scotty Bowman. "They played the same way during the regular season. There won't be many goals scored in this series. Both teams have lines which are conscious of their defensive play."

New York coach Al Arbour said he expected a close game. "We know what kind of club they are and they know what kind of club we are. That long layoff didn't bother them at all."

The Canadiens, returning to action after a nine day layoff, appeared to have trouble getting untracked early in the game.

Westfall opened the scoring with a 3-40 goal in the middle session on a rather weird play as he picked up a rebound off the back boards and beat Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden from the right wing.

Dryden moved well out of the net to clear the loose puck, then changed his mind and reversed his field.

"I saw (Denis) Potvin shoot it in," said Dryden. "It was going in on an angle that would usually bring it close to the net. . . . The puck got further away from the net than I anticipated. I thought I had the angle on Westfall, but I didn't."

Shutt tied the score with his first goal of the playoffs with 6:59 gone in the middle session. The Canadiens led 2-1.

Robinson tied the game as he moved in to poke in a rebound after Smith had made a save on a shot by Doug Jarvis from the left wing.

Smith was unhappy with his play on the tying effort.

"I lost the puck," he said. "It hit the palm of my glove and then bounced out. Then they came right back and got the puck to (Yvan) Cournoyer in the open and he scored."

The series resumes here Thursday night before shifting to Uniondale, N.Y., for games Saturday and next Tuesday.

'Emotional Letdown' Works Against Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Philadelphia dumped Philadelphia unceremoniously on home-ice Tuesday night in the opener of their Stanley Cup playoff semi-finals and Flyers coach Fred Shero conceded that "maybe we were due to lose here."

A pair of third-period goals by veteran defenceman Dallas Smith and centre Gregg Sheppard gave the Bruins a 4-2 victory over the Flyers in their best-of-seven National Hockey League playoff series. Game two is scheduled here Thursday night.

After the hard-fought match Shero and coach Don Cherry of the Bruins said the series may go the full seven games.

Boston and Philadelphia went the distance in eliminating Los Angeles Kings and Toronto Maple Leafs respectively in the best-of-seven quarter-finals and the two survivors were exhausted after the opener.

Boston put the pressure on the Flyers almost from the start and got an early first-period goal from defenceman Gary Doak, his first point in 39 games. Orest Kindrachuk tied the score for the Flyers 11 minutes later.

In the second period, veteran Ken Hodge drilled a low, long shot during a power play to give Boston a 2-1 lead and then Reg Leach tied the game for Philadelphia when the puck skipped past Bruin goaltender Gilles Gilbert after hitting Leach's skate after a Bill Barber shot.

Philadelphia goalkeeper Bernie Parent, who appeared shaky at times, said he never saw the first two Boston goals. He also didn't have much of a chance on Smith's game winner at 4:29 of the third period and Sheppard's shot from a faceoff at 6:17.

But, Shero said the Bruins

Philadelphia had won 24 consecutive games on home ice—20 in the regular season and four in the playoffs—and had an eight-game playoff-winning streak over two seasons snapped by Boston.

"You have no right to win a playoff unless you win in the other team's rink," Shero said, noting that's what happened last season when the Flyers won their second Stanley Cup against the Sabres on Buffalo ice.

deserved the victory which ended two Flyer records.

Defenceman Joe Watson and other Flyers felt the club was suffering from the strain of the tough and controversial series against Toronto.

"We had a little emotional letdown after the Toronto game Sunday, and it was hard to get up for the game against Boston," said Watson.

Captain Bobby Clarke of the Flyers, tired and disappointed, agreed with the theory that Philadelphia is in the throws of a letdown.

"We'll be back," he said. "They just outworked us. I don't think there is much difference in the club."

Coach Cherry praised the work of defenceman Brad Park, just recovered from a recent knee operation.

"He looked almost 100 per cent to me," he said. "That's about the best game he's played so far."

Gilbert came up with the big saves when they were most needed, making a total of 25 while Parent had 20.

Indianapolis Tries For Great Comeback

By The Canadian Press
Indianapolis Racers are hoping to make World Hockey Association history Thursday night and there's not a player on their team that doesn't feel they can do it.

No team has ever come back from a 3-1 playoff deficit to win a WHA playoff series, but after Tuesday night's 5-3 victory over New England Whalers, the Racers are only one game away from winning their best-of-seven U.S. semi-final.

"I know many of the people in New England felt we were dead after we dropped our third game last Friday," said Racers' coach Jacques Demers. "But not for one minute did I think my club was out of it."

"We've had our backs to the wall many times this season and each time we've responded to the challenge. We've won the games we had to win and now it's all down to the last one Thursday night."

San Diego Mariners avoided elimination from the semi-final when they edged Houston Aeros 3-2 in Tuesday's other game. Winnipeg Jets and Calgary Cowboys resume the Canadian final tonight in Calgary with Winnipeg leading the best-of-seven series 2-0.

The Indianapolis-New England game was actually settled late in the second period after the Whalers had trimmed a 2-0 Indianapolis lead to 2-1 on a goal by Tom Webster at the 15:35 mark.

Then with the Whalers pressing and taking the play away from the Racers, Renald Heeler took a pass from Michael Parizeau off a face-off, circled to the right of New England's Cap Reeder and drilled a low wrist shot into the corner of the net at 18:02.

Fifty-eight seconds later the Racers put the game out of reach as Dave Keon took a pass from Byron Baltimore deep in the slot and rammed a quick wrist shot into the corner of the net to make it 4-2.

At San Diego, rookie centre Bob Doherty broke a 1-1 tie early in the third period as the Mariners ended Houston's playoff winning streak at 13 games, a major league record.

Doherty took an assisting pass from Brian Morenz and slapped a 10-foot shot past Aero goalie Ron Grahame five minutes into the third period. Kevin Devine added a goal at 6:47 to put the game out of the reach of the Aeros.

Houston pulled goaltender

Grahame in the final minute, and with the extra man on the ice, John Tonelli scored the second Aero goal.

Added Teams a Sign of Surging Softball Interest

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Victoria Bates' participation in the world men's softball championships earlier this year may or may not be responsible, but there is increased interest in Victoria's senior leagues this season.

Three of the four district leagues will start with one more team than last year. And, as it happens, senior softball swings into action Sunday.

This also will be the weekend that Bates, who share the world title in the middle session on a rather weird play as he picked up a rebound off the back boards and beat Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden from the right wing.

Dryden moved well out of the net to clear the loose sweeping a doubleheader from Magicians, 8-1 and 8-2. They'll make their home debut with a four-game series against Abbotsford.

Saturday's games at Royal Athletic Park start at 7 and 8:30 p.m. and the series winds up Sunday afternoon at 1:30 and 3 p.m.

The Sabbath will be a heavy duty day for the city's senior leagues. The Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's League, the Victoria Senior Women's League and the Heywood Men's League all open their seasons with four-game programs.

The district's other senior circuit — will start play Tuesday evening at Sanscha Park in Sidney.

Only Heywood has failed to add a team to its league. Both the Women's League and the Stuffy McGinnis League have added all-junior lineups to boost their team totals from eight to nine. Sidney will start with six teams, an increase of one over last season.

The McGinnis League, operating out of Central Park, has lost Nanaimo but gained with the addition of Juan de Fuca Builders and Matthews Heating, both junior teams.

Juan de Fuca, formed around the nucleus of last year's Sooke juniors, will be managed by Jim Moody and will rely heavily on the pitching of Larry Cole, the outstanding 18-year-old, who played briefly with Bates and then finished the season with Royal Oak Sporting Goods, in the McGinnis League.

Matthews, built around the remains of Cordova Bay juniors, have an outstanding hurler in Brian Scobey. Both junior squads hope the experience of playing against senior rivals will help them to a possible provincial title and appearance in Canada's first junior men's tournament.

Completing the McGinnis league are holdovers Molsons (which operated as Tony's last year), Mike's Sports Shop, Royal Oak, Sooke Merchants, Port Angeles Telecab, Seaboard Construction and Ingraham Hotel.

Ingraham, the defending champions, have lost the big bat of catcher-outfielder Dave Kroschinsky, now teaching in Kelowna, but have strengthened with the addition of Warren Campbell, Bob Wheller and Rick Krawetz, all with Tony's last year.

Royal Oak has lost utility player Bob Gray to Bates and pitcher Gord Warren, now employed in Prince George, but expect youthful Bob Fletcher to give Ken Fox strong pitching support.

Sunday's opening games will start at 1, 2:30, 4 and 6:30 p.m.

DONNA BLACKSTOCK joins Doc's Blues

The addition of a junior team sponsored by McDonald's Furniture and eight holdovers give the Senior Women's League its nine teams.

Esquimalt Hygrade Radio is another junior entry, again competing against CJVI Vices, defending provincial "B" champion Stockers, McDonald's Seniors, London Boxing Club (formerly Tony's or Y-Notes), Seaboard, Ingraham Hotel and Esquimalt Combos.

Adding to hopes of another successful season are improvements in Hyacinth Park, at the corner of Interurban and Marigold. A number of women's games will be scheduled at Central during the season.

Stocker's appeared to have strengthened greatly by clinching three players from arch-rival Vices. Moving to Stocker's pitcher Debbie Derksen, shortstop Sandy Ferguson and Lee Wallace.

In addition, Vicesites have lost pitcher-utility player Donna Blackstock to Vancouver's Doc's Blues, an entry in the new Northwest Major Women's League. Vancouver McLeans and Eldorado also are competing in the northwest league along with teams from Spokane, Eugene, Portland, Yakima, Rogue River and Seattle.

Sidney's newest addition, sponsored by the Indian Friendship Centre, will open the Sanscha Park season Tuesday against KOA. Other teams in the league are Harvey's Sporting Goods, Sidney Hotel, Seaboard Properties and Sidney Travelodge (formerly Paint and Paper).

The Heywood League has lost William Head Steelers to the Commercial League operating in Macdonald Park but added Esquimalt Juniors to keep its strength at eight.

Defending champion Capital Builders, Hygrade Radio, Castle Properties (nee London Boxing Club), Remco Office Equipment (nee Tony's), Taylor House Moving (nee Molsons), Century Inn and Webb and Trace complete the Heywood League.

Sunday's openers are at 11 a.m., 1, 3 and 6:30 p.m. Game times for the Women's League openers at Hyacinth are 10 a.m., noon, 2 and 4 p.m.

The softballers have the teams, parks, players and interest but need only the weatherman's co-operation to put meaning into the "play ball" call.

Wild Steelhead Stocks Show General Decline

"Most of our wild steelhead stocks are not in good shape; the catch trend is downward in most streams."

This depressing bit of news was contained in a letter to the Steelhead Society of British Columbia from David Narver, the anadromous fisheries co-ordinator for the provincial fish and wildlife branch.

"Some tough decisions are going to have to be made soon," submits Narver.

From the annual steelhead questionnaire analysis, Narver has "eyeballed" some general population trends in a number of Mainland and Vancouver Island rivers.

Using the 1967-68 to 1974-75 data, the major winter steelhead rivers fall into the following categories:

—Stable or increasing: Kitimat, Squamish, Sooke, Gold, Campbell, Quinsam, Chehalis, Nimpkish, Bella Coola.

—Slight decline: Vedder, Nanaimo, Stamp (both summer and winter runs), Coquitlam, Big Qualicum, Nitinat.

—Moderate decline (1/4): Chemainus, Oyster, Cowichan, Somass (both summer and winter), S. Alouette, Seymour, Capilano.

—Major decline (1/2): Salmon, Englishman, San Juan, Puntledge, Little Qualicum, Ash (both summer and winter), Cheakamus.

"The most common denominator for most streams with marked declines is massive clearcutting (except Capilano, S. Alouette and Seymour) and substantial angling pressure," says Narver.

He goes on to lay most of the blame for declining stocks in many Island streams on "forest cover removal and its influence on flow regime."

Clearcutting generally results in intensified freshets, causing greater gravel movement and bank destruction than is found in unlogged or patch logged watersheds.

This, in turn, reduces the habitat available to steelhead smolts, which normally overwinter in the streambottom rubble.

"It would not be surprising if the Nanaimo did not 'crash' in the next few years given the present rate of logging," adds Narver.

"If this is a truly cause and effect relationship, it will probably be decades before the watershed recovers and the stream approximates its original productivity."

Meanwhile, steelhead managers have a number of options open to rectify the problem.

They can let post-logging recovery follow its natural course, open up stream sections currently inaccessible to steelhead, improve or rehabilitate tributaries and augment natural production with hatchery-reared steelhead.

Others, more costly and remote options, are dams to control freshets and major in-river engineering projects. They key is to pair the right option with each stream on an individual basis.

Under certain conditions, salmon enhancement projects can have an adverse impact on summer steelhead.

For example, the escapement of steelhead overlaps that of pink and sockeye salmon into the Skeena River system.

OUTDOORS stewart lang

Any efforts by federal fisheries to enhance the salmon stocks will mean a greater gillnetting effort and subsequent loss of steelhead.

Some of the management options available on a stream-specific basis to remedy this problem, which is bound to crop up under the joint federal-provincial salmonid enhancement program, are as follows:

—Provincial authorities can veto salmon projects that could harm the steelhead fishery.

—Increase the steelhead stocks in proportion to that of salmon by artificial means.

—By tagging, determine the time of entry and passage through the salmon fishery so the fishery can be regulated to provide adequate steelhead escapement. Work is starting on this effort this year.

—Open up new areas for steelhead or introduce them to currently-barren tributaries.

The problems confronting steelhead fishing in this province aren't unsurmountable but a certain amount of guts, co-operation and expenditure of money is necessary before the runs can be guaranteed for posterity.

Orioles Get Game Winner From Unexpected Source

By The Associated Press
Brooks Robinson and Mark Belanger, a pair of "good-field, no-hit" ballplayers, drove California Angels batty Tuesday night.

First Robinson broke up Nolan Ryan's bid for a no-hitter and then the light-hitting Belanger broke up the American League game—and the result was a 3-2, 10-inning victory for Baltimore Orioles.

"I don't have many game winning hits," said Belanger, whose bunt-loaded single in the 10th knocked in the winning run. "In 10 years, I've had two, maybe one."

The game-winning hit came off an "up and in hummer" from reliever Dick Drago. "He struck me out on a ball up there last time and I was looking for something inside," said Belanger, a .257 hitter this season. "I got it and the ball landed where nobody was."

Robinson, also known more for his glove than his bat, got the first hit of the game off the hard-throwing Ryan—a one-out, run-scoring triple in the seventh inning. Robinson was batting .115 at game time.

Ryan, who has thrown four no-hitters in his career, had struck out 11 batters and walked eight before giving up Robinson's bloop triple into the left field corner that cut the California lead to 2-1.

In Tuesday's other American League games, Detroit Tigers routed Oakland A's 10-2, Cleveland Indians trimmed Minnesota Twins 7-5 and New York Yankees nipped Texas Rangers 1-0. In the National League, St. Louis Cardinals defeated San Francisco Giants 7-1, Los Angeles Dodgers edged Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3, Cincinnati Reds trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 7-3, New York Mets downed Atlanta Braves 6-5 and Chicago Cubs squeezed by San Diego Padres 4-2.

The Orioles tied the game 2-2 in the eighth on a run-scoring single by Royle Stillman. Andres Mora opened the Baltimore 10th with a single and raced to third when Drago fielded a bunt by Ken Singleton and threw wildly into centre field attempting to force Mora.

Following an intentional walk to load the bases, Drago got Tim Nordbrook to hit into a force at home and then retired Robinson on a short fly to centre, but Belanger singled sharply over the head of third baseman Dave Chalk. Rookie first baseman Jason Thompson collected four consecutive singles and drove in two runs and Rusty Staub hit a grand slam home run to lead Detroit over Oakland.

The 21-year-old Thompson, called up from Evansville just last Friday, singled in a run in the first inning and singled home another in the fourth against Vida Blue, 1-3. A pair of solo home runs by George Hendrick, his first homers of the season, and a strong relief performance by Jackie Brown sparked Cleveland past Minnesota.

Tennis Winner Accepts an IOU

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tom Gorman said Monday he's satisfied with a $6,000 IOU for winning the singles championship and sharing the doubles crown in the Sacramento Calif., indoor tennis tournament.

"There just is going to be a delay in the payment," said the Seattle pro. "I really don't consider it a big deal."

Earlier Monday in Sacramento, tournament promoter Bob Reid acknowledged he told players Saturday night that the tournament couldn't afford cash prizes for Sunday's champions, but that he felt legally obligated and would make good on promissory notes.

However, one unidentified player called the Association of Tennis Professionals in Dallas, which was looking into the matter.

Reid said he owed about $11,000 of the $25,000 prize money advertised for the four-day event. Gorman is to receive $5,000 for winning the singles title and $1,000 as his share of the doubles crown.

Gorman, Bob Carmichael, Sherwood Stewart, John Whitlinger, Mike Estep and Mike Cahill received promissory notes. "We'll work all that stuff out," Gorman said of the money due after he beat Carmichael in the final singles match.

Also in tennis, Billie Jean King of the U.S. and Betty Stove of The Netherlands won the $100,000 Bridgestone women's doubles championship in Tokyo with a 6-2, 6-3 victory over Americans Ann Kiyomura and Mona Guerrant.

In Madrid, Victor Pecci of Paraguay won a week-long tournament by defeating Elio Delbecq of France 7-5, 7-6, 3-6, 2-6, 6-4. Pecci won $3,000, Delbecq $3,000.

In Stockholm, Monday, Wojciech Fibak of Poland upset Ili Nastase of Romania 6-4, 7-6, to win the men's singles in the Stockholm World Championship of Tennis tournament. Fibak won $17,000, Nastase $7,000.

In Burlington, Ont., mark Cox of White Rock, defeated Tony Bardsley of Vancouver 6-0, 6-4, Sunday, to win an invitational tennis tournament. Cox and Bardsley combined to win the doubles defeating Keith Carpenter of Toronto and Harry Fritz of California 6-3, 4-6, 6-1.

BUDGET PLAN WORKS FOR DAVIS

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Willie Davis says he went farther in debt the longer he played baseball — but no more. He's letting the Padres handle his money for him and, for the first time, he's happy. For the first time in his 15-year career, Davis indicates he is living on a budget.

"I don't even know what I'm making," he said Friday. The Padres decline to say, either, how much is paid — or kept out — for Davis, who left St. Louis Cardinals last year because of personal problems involving alimony payments to his former wife. At that time Davis said: "If she's going to get all my money, let her play centre field."

The 36-year-old Davis, traded to San Diego for utility outfielder Dick Sharon, admits that he "wasted a lot of money during my career and that's where all my problems started . . ."

"But I've learned in the last couple of years if you play this game as long as I have and don't end up with anything, you have to be crazy," said Willie.

Nerves Don't Get Break If You Train a Favorite

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Having the odds-on favorite for Saturday's 102nd Kentucky Derby isn't any easier on trainer LeRoy Jolley's nerves than the 2-to-1 shot he won America's most famed horse race with last year.

"I was as nervous as I could be last year and I'm as nervous as I can be this year," Jolley said Tuesday after sending Derby favorite Honest Pleasure onto the Churchill Downs track for a morning gallop.

"Foolish Pleasure (last year's winner) was a much easier horse to train. Honest Pleasure makes you work for your money. He's just so eager to run that you have to do anything you can to conserve his energy."

John Nazareth, Honest Pleasure's regular rider for morning workouts, was aboard the winner of the Flamingo, Florida Derby and Blue Grass stakes for the gallop.

"If you saw him gallop, you'd know that if he was any stronger, I don't know who we'd get to gallop him," Jolley said. "He's so full of himself and just wants to run."

But Jolley doesn't figure the more than 100,000 fans expected to jam Churchill Downs for the $125,000-added Derby to make his colt the odds-in betting choice that he was in the future book.

There has to be tremendous support for Bold Forbes and there certainly should be," the trainer said. "He has run some great races."

While Honest Pleasure was taking the southern route to Louisville, Bold Forbes — owned by Estaban Tizol, retired Puerto Rican banker and auto dealer — has made his waves both on the West Coast and in New York.

After starting the season with second and third-place finishes, he won the San Jacinto at Santa Anita, set a record in taking the Bay Shore at Aqueduct in 1:20 4-5 and scored by 4 1/2 lengths in the Wood Memorial.

Honest Pleasure and Bold Forbes, both with blazing speed early in their races, will face eight, or possibly nine, challengers in the 1 1/4-mile Derby.

The latest arrival at Churchill Downs was Sarad Stabile's Bidson, a bay son of Bold Bidder who has raced only six times in his lifetime, winning two, finishing second twice and third once.

"We had planned to take him to Chicago for the Illinois Derby this Saturday, but that's such a small race track for such a big horse, so we decided just yesterday to bring him here," said trainer Tony Battaglia.

Bidson won the first race of his life less than a month ago, scoring by 12 lengths in a 1 1/16-mile race, then triumphed again last Thursday by five lengths against older horses, Battaglia said.

Others in the Derby field include Arkansas Derby winner Elocutionist, Cojak, On The Sly, Play The Red and Inca Roca.

In addition, trainer Laz Barrera will take a close look at a workout this morning by Harbor View Farm's Life's Home in Chicago to decide between the Illinois and Kentucky derbies for the colt.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

TORONTO (CP) — The World Hockey Association has accepted Bud Poile's resignation from the post of executive vice-president and is taking further steps to curb violence in the game.

Poile's resignation was demanded by Quebec Nordiques after a fight-filled game April 11 between Calgary Cowboys and the Nordiques in Quebec City. Marc Tardif, Quebec's high-scoring winger, suffered a concussion and other injuries in that game.

"Poile, who has made a significant contribution to the World Hockey Association, felt it would be in the best interests of the league if he stepped down, inasmuch as he felt he did not have the full co-operation of all the clubs," Ben Haskin, league chief executive officer, said in a prepared release.

Haskin said that following a lengthy trustees meeting, the league decided to set up a special committee to investigate and make a report on violence.

"The committee will consist of players, team officials and league trustees," said Haskin.

"Several leading players in the WHA — Gordie Howe, playing president of the Houston Aeros, Winnipeg's Bobby Hull, who has been an outspoken leader against violence, and San Diego's Andre Lacroix, the WHA's players' association representative — will be asked to join the committee and take an active part."

Haskin said the league also plans to consider the possibility of enclosing all players' benches and penalty boxes to protect both players and fans.

Ali Creating New Interest in World Boxing

MIAMI (AP) — Angelo Dundee, the trainer behind Muhammad Ali's throne, says boxing is undergoing a worldwide evolution — its popularity is soaring in foreign countries and the sport is in the midst of a domestic renaissance.

"They all go through a space of time when boxing's tremendously popular," Dundee said. "It's going to be popular in the United States again."

"It's starting to take hold again now."

But for the moment, the major interest is abroad, Dundee said.

"The whole facet of the business has turned around," he said. "What the other places are going through with boxing right now is what the United States went through 29 to 30 years ago."

"It's evolution. Right now, boxing is huge in places like England and Tokyo, although Tokyo's starting to get depleted."

Part of the renewed interest in boxing is due to Ali, Dundee told the Miami News in a telephone interview from Landover, Md. Ali will defend his title there Friday night against challenger Jimmy Young.

The champ, Dundee said, is the greatest boxing salesman of all.

"Muhammad is the greatest seller of our product right now," said Dundee, who lives here. This is a profession where you sell.

"We're salesmen. We sell boxing."

Dundee spends more days on the road selling boxing than he does at home at the Fifth Street Gym in Miami Beach, he said.

"I guess I'm gone a goodly number of days," he said. "My wife marks an X (on a calendar) every time I leave the house on a trip and there are more Xs than not."

Dundee is the trainer of eight world champions including Ali. That's a record, he said. To keep it and to sell boxing, he must go to where the fights are — Puerto Rico, South Africa, Hawaii, France and Landover.

"I'm a co-manager," he said. "I'm the guy that works every facet of boxing."

"There aren't that many of us around any more in boxing today. If people want my expertise, I'm available."

"I'll work any fight. If someone wants me to work a specific fight, they hire me and I go. The kids respect me because of my track record."

"The handlers want me to evaluate what their guy's got to do. They want the snap judgment of what to do in the ring."

WALLET-SIZED NEWSPAPERS?

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Imagine carrying the newspaper home in a wallet and reading it off the wall when one gets there.

Researchers, who say even a 500-page newspaper fits easily on two four-by-six-inch cards of microfilm, are working on it.

A newsboy could carry a whole lot of papers, but I don't know if advertisers would go for it," said Donald McArthur, vice-president of the microfilm products division of 3M Co.

Salt Lake City Tribune, concerned about the rising cost of newsprint, already has approached 3M about the possibility of a home microfilm system. J. W. Gallivan, publisher of The Tribune, said newsprint will cost the paper $30.8 million a year by 1985.

Gallivan said he wants a system that will enlarge a microscopic newspaper to 11 by 14 inches and project it on a wall or screen. The cost of the system must be less than $200. The newspaper would rent the system to subscribers for about $7 a month.

Most viewers—or readers as they are called—show only a part of the newspaper page at one time, McArthur said. Although adequate for newspaper readers it might upset an advertiser who counts on full-page impact to get his message across.

Ainscough President Of GVAR

Dr. Brian Ainscough was elected president and Ken Williamson vice-president at the annual meeting of the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded.

About 70 on hand for the meeting at the Eric Martin Institute saw Douglas Hand presented with a national award for his Christmas card design. Presentation was made by past president E. S. Linkletter.

The GVAR has just undergone a reorganization which will see it function with two boards. The newly-created management board will look after existing facilities such as sheltered workshops and group homes.

The general board will deal with all remaining functions and policy making.

Dr. Ainscough said today the move is intended to divide functions so the association can operate more effectively.

CANADIANS SERVING on the Golan Heights with the United Nations disengagement observer force are determined to get the mail through to their families at all costs. Here, Sgt. To be used only in an emergency, Golan is yet to be commandeered as a military mail burro.

BABY BOOM

BEIRUT (Reuter) — Doctors estimate that the birth rate in Lebanon has increased 20 per cent since the start of the civil war. "People have been staying home at night going to bed early," said a Beirut resident. "There has been little else in the way of entertainment."

Pot-Related Fatality a First

LONDON (Reuter) — A 19-year-old railroad signalman killed last November when his sports car crashed into a truck has made medical history as the first documented case of a driver shown to have in his blood high levels of marijuana.

The diagnosis, reported in the medical journal, The Lancet, was made possible by a new blood and urine test. The test, now being studied by police, was developed by scientists at Surrey University.

"Cannabis marijuana, like alcohol, produces euphoria and impairs judgment," the scientists said. "There can be little doubt that it contributed to the accident. An awful lot of attention has been paid to the effects of alcohol on driving, but very little to cannabis."

Hydro Threat to Cranes

PITT MEADOWS (CP) — Local naturalists fear four pairs of Greater Sandhill cranes will be affected by construction of a B.C. Hydro power line within 500 yards of their breeding ground on Pitt Polder, a marshy area 20 miles east of Vancouver.

The Great Sandhill crane is regarded as an endangered species. The Pitt Polder birds are thought to be the largest remaining colony in Canada.

Wilma Robinson, founder of the Alouette Field Naturalists Society, said: "Half the flock could be affected by helicopters flying directly over their nesting area."

Bob Bradley, environmental resources department wildlife biologist with B.C. Hydro, said the company has decided not to ask the sub-contractor to halt work on the transmission towers.

"If we ask the contractor to stop until the young are raised in August, we'll have a fight on our hands and work will probably slow down," Bradley said. "That would probably be more detrimental to the birds than pushing on and getting out of the area as soon as possible."

HEAVY CARS GET BREAK

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's proposed new system for registering automobiles will be changed to reduce the fees on heavier cars and station wagons already on the road. Premier Ed Schreyer said the fees under the new system will be reduced by approximately 10 per cent for each year of vehicle's age until a certain minimum level is reached.

Gov't Ducks Pay Gap Blame

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will not take the blame for widening the gap between men's and women's incomes because it imposed wage controls through the federal anti-inflation program, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald says.

He made the comment this week after meeting privately with members of the National Action Committee on the status of women who lobbied MPs after a weekend conference.

Committee delegates called for withdrawal of the anti-inflation bill, saying wage controls keep women at the bottom of the income scale.

They rejected arguments that a catch-up clause in the anti-inflation bill allows women and other lower-income groups to get wage increases of up to 30 per cent.

The committee says the government has not publicized the clause enough to convince women they have a means to gain financial equality. Many said it was up to the employer to act on behalf of the employees.

"The fact is, the clause is there and if the employer says he can't do it because of the Anti-Inflation Board, then the union can appeal on its own," Macdonald said.

A bargaining unit could ask its employer for a 10 per cent raise for male employees, for example, and up to 30 per cent for female employees if it could be justified under the catch-up clause.

Oriole Joins In Seattle Celebration

The Canadian armed forces sail-training vessel HMCS Oriole will take a leading role in American bicentennial celebrations in Seattle this weekend.

She will lead a sailpast on Lake Washington Saturday officially open new facilities of the Seattle Yacht Club.

On Friday, Jean McKee, deputy administrator of the American Revolution Bicentennial Committee, will present bicentennial flag and crest to the Oriole. Accepting the presentation on behalf of Rear-Admiral Andrew Collier, commander maritime forces Pacific, will be Capt. (N) Richard Okros, commander of the Esquimalt-based training squadron.

The Oriole will be skippered by Lt.-Cmdr. Bill Walker of Victoria's naval reserve division HMCS Malahat.

The ship will be crewed by both Malahat and regular force personnel. Also aboard will be trainees from the Junior Officer Training Division of the Fleet School at CRF Esquimalt.

Sidney, N. Saanich Eye Smaller Centre

Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm said Tuesday his municipality and North Saanich are thinking in terms of a scaled-down recreation centre which would include pool and rink and cost $1.5 to $1.8 million.

Target date for putting a proposal to ratepayers in a referendum is Sept. 11, he said.

Meanwhile, Mayor Jean Butler of Central Saanich said Tuesday a letter is going out shortly to ratepayers there explaining why the council withdrew from a partnership with North Saanich and Sidney for a recreation complex to serve the entire Saanich Peninsula.

She had said earlier that a proposed complex was too expensive and the other two partners were not prepared to compromise. In addition, there were unspecified ancillary costs which were likely to increase.

Assuming a one-third provincial government grant, the latest centre would cost Sidney and North Saanich about $500,000 each and could be built and operated with about a four-mill tax increase, Malcolm said.

Central Saanich council has named a committee to examine the feasibility of building its own recreation centre, keeping costs to three mills. That could mean a prefabricated ice arena similar to the one just completed at Sooke for about $630,000.

At the same time, a citizen group in Central Saanich is circulating a petition calling on council to let residents decide on a larger centre built by the three communities by putting a proposal to them in a referendum. The group, led by G. D. Gurr of 1188 Dignan, has gathered about 600 signatures to date.

The division on recreation matters between Central Saanich council and its two northern neighbors widened Monday night with motions passed by Sidney and North Saanich councils calling on Central Saanich to pay its full share of the Peninsula Recreation Commission budget or withdraw from it.

Central Saanich has said it will pay only three-quarters of a mill, about $17,000, towards its one-third share of the $60,000 plus budget for this year.

Mayor Butler said she couldn't comment on her council's response to that development until the matter had come before aldermen at their meeting next Monday.

The commission was formed last year to develop recreation programs for the peninsula. Sidney and North Saanich plan on continuing their own commission,

All Cars Rust, Ford Comments After Suit Filed

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. says rust affects all makes of cars and trucks and its vehicles are no more likely to rust than any others.

Tony Fredo, Ford's public relations manager, said in an interview today that rusting is a problem of the auto industry and not just of Ford.

He was commenting on reports that a group of Ontario Ford owners have launched a class action against Ford claiming early rust damage and that the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs is investigating complaints Ford used misleading advertising concerning the rust resistance of its vehicles.

The Ontario Rusty Ford Owners' Association said it has filed a suit in the Ontario Supreme Court charging Ford with breach of warranty.

Fatality Identified

REWARD FOR DAGGER

Friends of the Provincial Museum Association has offered a reward for information leading to the return of a rare, northern Canadian Indian knife stolen March 12.

"It's only a token sum," said Ron Lovatt, museum extension officer. "We still hope someone will drop the knife in the mail. No questions asked."

He declined to state the amount of the reward.

The knife was on loan from the Royal Scottish Museum to the National Museum of Man in Ottawa and formed part of a travelling exhibition. It disappeared when the Athabaskan Indians display was in Victoria.

The knife is described as iron, 14 inches long, with a double-edged bevelled blade, the hilt wrapped with a leather strip, terminating in a fork with curled ends. Lovatt said the knife has only historic value.

"The theft doesn't make us look very good," he said. "This exhibition travelled throughout Scotland and England, and nothing was stolen, but when it came to Victoria the knife disappeared."

My granddaughter Sue is sixteen and enjoys cooking and does it well. She is a tremendous satisfaction to me.

As I watched her work questions were swarming in my mind. Was I paying enough attention to our young cooks? Are new brides who have never cooked able to make use of my recipes?

With Sue in mind I hunted up my favorite oven beef stew which is a straightforward recipe with no preliminaries.

Young couples can invite two more couples for dinner and when the cook has this stew in the oven they can play bridge or poker, listen to records or watch TV until baking time is up and salad has to be made.

OVEN BEEF STEW (Serves 6 generously)

(NOTE: No preliminary sautéing is required.)

- 2 lbs. stewing beef cut into 1" cubes
- 1/4 c. flour
- 1/4 tsp. thyme
- 1/4 tsp. marjoram or basil
- 1/4 tsp. celery seed
- 1/4 tsp. sage
- 1 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1-16 tsp. paprika
- 4 medium onions, sliced
- 6 medium potatoes, thinly sliced
- 2 medium carrots, thinly sliced
- 1 1/2 c. hot water
- 4 tsp. beef bouillon cordial

Straightforward details on how to prepare an oven beef stew that will warm, nourish and please the whole family are presented by Mary Moore (above right).

1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1/4 c. dry white wine or cooking sherry (optional) butter or margarine (see below)

Mix together flour and seasonings and dredge meat pieces in them.

In a large casserole with tight-fitting cover arrange IN LAYERS half of the meat, half of the onions, half of the potatoes and half of the carrots. REPEAT.

Add beef bouillon cordial in hot water and add Worcestershire sauce and wine if used. Pour evenly over casserole contents. Dot top with butter or margarine. Cover and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. 3 hours.

ORANGE OATMEAL MUFFINS (12 to 14 large)

- 1 c. quick-cooking rolled oats
- 1/2 c. orange juice (add grated rind of 1 orange if fresh if fresh oranges are used)
- 1/2 c. boiling water
- 1/2 c. brown sugar
- 1/4 c. white sugar
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 c. raisins
- 1 c. cake-and-pastry flour
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. vanilla

First thing to do is soak the rolled oats in orange juice and boiling water for 15 minutes.

utes. (Add orange rind if used.)

In heater bowl cream together margarine, brown sugar and white sugar. Beat in eggs and oats mixture. Stir in raisins. Remove beaters. Add flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and vanilla and mix thoroughly.

Spoon into paper-lined muffin cups to 3/4 full. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes. Serve warm.

FOOD DYES 'RISKY'

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A Vanderbilt University pharmacologist has "called" for greater effort to determine the amount of food and drug dyes being consumed by children. He said they face a greater risk of harm from such additives than adults.

Dr. John Wilson said his attempts to calculate the quantities of dye consumed have been hampered by the trade secrets of manufacturers of colored drug products.

Since the doses of additives to which people are exposed are not well known, they constitute a "covert environmental pollutant," Dr. Wilson told the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

A number of dyes used in foods have been banned in the U.S. because of their suspected harmful properties, most recently Red Dye No. 2, which is suspected of causing cancer in animals. Some researchers also believe additives may cause hyperactivity in children and, Dr. Wilson said, some children cannot take colored pills because they produce allergic reactions.

Dr. Wilson said that some persons, especially children, are more at risk than others because they eat large amounts of foods and drinks with high additive contents. In addition, he said, many children with chronic diseases constantly ingest colored medication.

In a paper delivered to a symposium on the special vulnerability of children to harmful substances, Dr. Wilson said he tried to determine the average consumption of additives.

He said a conservative estimate is that the average child consumes about 15 grams (about half an ounce) of coloring a year and that some children consume as much as 53 grams (a little less than two ounces).

This is far below the World Health Organization's standards of 343 grams a year as an accepted intake, Dr. Wilson noted, but he said that figure was arrived at through animal studies and may not apply to humans.

Mint Sauce: A Wonderful Roman Idea

Mint is pleasant to have growing either outdoors or inside, if necessary, for its refreshing fragrance is never intrusive yet always there if wanted. The leaves need only a slight bruising by the fingers to yield the same fragrance as was known by the Romans, and probably the earlier Mediterranean people.

It is believed that Mint Sauce was a Roman idea they took to Britain together with mint plants, for these grew profusely on the shores of the Mediterranean. The British have never turned their backs on mint since. But during the 12 centuries or so that mint has been known in Britain they have done little with it in everyday cooking beyond making sauce for lamb and putting a sprig into new potatoes and green peas while cooking.

Perhaps it is only around London and the south coast of England that mint ideas became static, for we hear of a delicious tidbit from the northern counties, called Mint Pasty.

When mint has grown enough this spring to yield a half cupful, try this recipe and serve as appetizers with tomato juice on the day you have the first garden picnic of spring.

MINT PASTY

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup finely chopped mint
 $\frac{1}{4}$  cup brown sugar
 $\frac{1}{2}$  cup currants
1 Tbsp. soft margarine
plain pastry

Wash, dry and strip mint leaves from stems. Chop finely.

Mix and blend all ingredients into a paste; spread on a rectangle of thinly rolled-out pastry.

Roll from one wide side, tightly. Seal on under side. Slice about  $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch wide; bake on cooking sheet (cookie tray) are the supreme dressings for salads; low in weight-building calories too, though high in protein and minerals. With the addition of finely chopped parsley, mint and chives in small quantities, your salad dressing varies from day to day, yet remains as simple as you like.

Here is a recipe which can be used as a base for cooking and serving other fresh young vegetables as they become available, either from garden or store—fresh green peas, small potatoes, spinach and Swiss chard, and the green beans of all kinds.

Just substitute the young vegetable you are using in place of Carrots.

MINTED YOUNG CARROTS

about 12 small carrots boiling water to just cover
2 Tbsp soft margarine
 $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp salt
2 Tbsp finely chopped fresh mint

Bring water to rapid boil. Meanwhile, wash and brush carrots. No need to scrape. Leave whole.

Add carrots to boiling water, having them no more than barely covered. Cook at gentle boil, (covered) for about 10 minutes only until tender, not soft. Drain, keep liquid for soup.

Add margarine and sprinkle mint and salt over carrots.

Shake constantly over heat to coat well; serve very hot with other vegetables and your meat dish.

In addition to those mentioned, I find mushrooms, eggplants and tuberous artichokes are developed in flavor with use of mint.

A skillet or frypan of equal parts of chopped eggplant, mushrooms, and sweet onion, sprinkled with finely chopped mint, cooked in just enough oil or soft margarine to make them tender—no more than eight to 10 minutes—makes a fine Sunday noon meal.

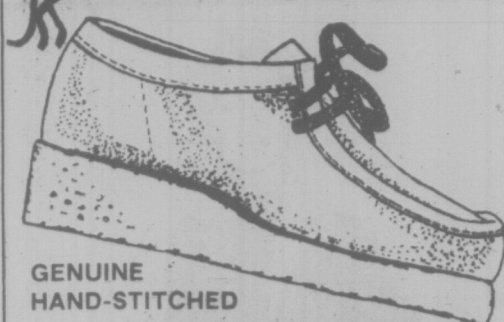

Thicken with one tablespoon wholewheat flour and a tablespoon of powdered skim milk; a shake of salt and paprika; and a little vegetable liquid if necessary for the thickness.

Serve on heated homemade wholewheat-millet buns. Quite delicious and unusual flavors.

A final note—chopped mint in small quantity blends with fruit salads of citrus fruits, and with apple and pear. Also in refreshing hot or cold drinks with the same range of fruits. Use with equal quantities of young leaves from the herb lemon balm as it comes into new growth this spring.

Once you use mint you will want to dry a quantity for adding to various foods in winter when fresh leaves are no longer available.

Put something extra special between you and the ground!

WHAT FOODS SHOULD YOU EAT IF YOU WANT TO HIT 100?

By MIMI SHERATON

What should you eat if you want to live to be 100?

While making no hard and fast promises, Dr. Sula Benet, the anthropologist, offers temptingly persuasive evidence that diet is at least one of the most important factors accounting for the legendary longevity of the people of the Caucasus.

A charming and hospitably comfortable hostess, Dr. Benet has taught anthropology at Hunter College where she is a professor, and also at Columbia and the Pratt Institute. She has spent many years living among the Armenians, Abkhazians, Georgians, Azerbaijanis, Chechenians and Daghestanis who inhabit the Soviet Caucasus, many of whom live active, full lives, long after passing the 100-year mark.

Among these was Khaf Lazaria, the Abkhazian who Dr. Benet said lived to be 140 and was thought by Dr. Benet to be the oldest woman in the world until her death in 1975. The old woman smoked, drank wine, and until her death, could thread a needle without wearing glasses as long as she worked with white thread in the shade or black thread in sunlight.

Dr. Benet's latest book "How to Live to Be 100," recently published by Dial Press, is a fascinating account of the lives of these people. Citing scientific and medical evidence, Dr. Benet tells of the lack of tension and competitiveness, the absence of industrial pollution, and the stabilizing effects of strong family and religious ties, as well as heredity, in accounting for the long lives reportedly enjoyed by these people. She devotes two particularly interesting chapters to their food and eating habits.

"Food is always, of course, the most conservative item to put in, or take out, of a culture," she said. "In the Caucasus, where Western dress and other Western forms have become accepted, food, other than Caucasian is still considered second-rate, neither tasty nor worthwhile to eat."

Moderation is always practiced at meals and overweight is considered an illness. Meals are shared with family and friends, chewing is slow and deliberate, and freshness is very much the prize.

"Vegetables and herbs are picked, and spices ground as close to mealtime as possible," Dr. Benet explained.

"Meat is freshly killed, never aged. Leftovers are not usually saved either, as it is believed they lose flavor as well as nutrients."

Certainly the description of the Caucasian larder is like that of a natural health food restaurant, with vegetable oils used instead of animal fats, and beans and nuts supplementing meats and fish for protein. Yogurt and a yogurt-like sour milk are much favored, as are whole grains in pilafs, porridges and breads.

Best of all, these foods are delicious, with a spectrum of flavors entirely different from our own. Meats are braised or grilled and dishes are seasoned with counterpoints of sweet dill and hot peppers, pungent green coriander (Chinese parsley or cilantro) and mildly fragrant Italian parsley, garlic and walnuts, mint and onion, tangy vinegar made from the strong red wines of Georgia and sun-gold vegetable oils.

There's No Need to Be Boring With the Beloved Potato

Potatoes are an important basic item of our diet. They are cheap and act as filler to a meal, have excellent food value and yet are usually given boring treatment in our kitchens.

To be great, potatoes don't need to be fancy, for there's nothing more simple than a dish of potatoes steamed and served in their skins.

But there are so many wonderful recipes for this beloved root vegetable, that there is no excuse for the home cook to stick to boiled, mashed, baked or fried year after year. A perfect example is the magnificent hash-brown potatoes I enjoyed on a long trip through the west.

Old West Hash-browns

Peel and poach eight medium sized waxy type potatoes until just tender. Drain and steam dry, but not softened, slice and then rice, or chop into small dice.

Melt six tablespoons bacon fat, butter or fine beef drippings in a heavy iron skillet, turn in the potatoes and press down into one large cake, shaking the pan gently and cooking over medium heat until a brown crust forms on the bottom. Run a spatula around the rim of the cake to keep it loose and add a little more fat over the top and allow it to run down.

Place a fitting tin plate over the cake and allow to steam for a minute or two, then, wearing oven mitts, turn over the skillet to flop the cake onto the plate. Add fat to the skillet and when it is heated through, carefully slide the potato cake back into the pan and crisp-brown the underside. Slide it off when done onto a hot serving platter and bring to the table piping hot.

Then there are my own potato pancakes, similar but a little more suited to be served together with a main course dish.

Tiny's Easy Potato Pancakes

Cook potatoes as above, but when steamed, mash thoroughly with three tablespoons butter, a drizzle of milk, fresh-ground black pepper and a dash of dried parsley. Taste and add salt if necessary and beat in one egg, with two tablespoons dried bread crumbs. Allow to cool right off, covered.

When the rest of the meal is ready to go, form the cold potato mix into burger-shaped cakes, but only one inch thick. Roll very gently in bread crumbs, retaining the shape and form.

Lower each pancake gently into a thin layer of very hot cooking oil in a big skillet and brown on both sides, aiming for a crispy brown skin and a lovely hot soft centre. Do just a few at a time so the oil put into a serving dish lined stays hot, and as each is done with foil, in a hot oven, and serve from the dish.

Then there are the deliciously authentic Jewish potato pancakes that one of my step-aunts turned into poetry:

Aunt Lou's Potato Pancakes

Grate four medium raw potatoes into a bowl, drain and squeeze out all the liquid (you can save this for a yeast starter) and grate in one medium onion, then add one lightly beaten egg, two tablespoons fine bread crumbs, one teaspoon salt, double grind of black pepper, and mix well. Heat a thin layer of vegetable cooking oil in a heavy skillet and lay out large spoonfuls of the mix in the pan, keeping them well separated. Cook them on medium-high heat, until crispy browned, remembering that being raw they need more cooking time than pancakes made with cooked ingredients. And again do a few at a time and drain and keep hot in an oven dish lined with crinkled foil set in a 300 oven.

Right in the middle of putting this cooking column together I had to drive down to the village to pick up the mail and do the food shopping.

The selection of potatoes in my local store wasn't that wide, at this off-season time, but I did buy a bag of Holland

Marsh, Ontario red potatoes for $1.09 for the ten-pound bag.

Taking my time, I selected a bag in which the potatoes were smooth, of even size, and in firm, good condition without top many eyes. I got the best of the off-season 'spuds' at the time of their highest cost, and yet we are talking about a food, basic to our western cuisine at under 11 cents a pound.

In terms of food values, that's a bargain; in terms of cost to our homemaker budgets, it is the cheapest food we buy. Potatoes are filling, and good for you, so don't sell them short in the kitchen.

If ever there was a food item that lent itself to experimentation, it has got to be the common old spud. So why not express your urge to be different in the kitchen — with potatoes?

indoor gardens

Dear Lynn and Joel:

Could you please tell me if it's "normal" for my asparagus fern to be producing shoots that are four to five feet long? The plant is a healthy-looking green — but the new shoots come up and grow almost touching the floor. Can I trim the plant without harming it? Could it possibly need repotting?—M.M.

DEAR M.M.:

Your question is somewhat like asking if it's "normal" to wake up every day and find a $100 bill on your dresser. Not only isn't it normal, it's sensational, and asparagus fern grows with their withering plants, yellowing spines and meager successes all over the country are as green with envy right now as is your plant.

As far as trimming it, that can only help, not harm, because trimming off new growth will help keep it fat and full by forcing the energy to stay on top instead of expending itself to keep those roots a-tootin'. As for repotting, asparagus fern has an enormous root system but can be stunted, so it's strictly up to you as to whether or not you want to take the chance. Personally, if we had a plant that was doing that beautifully, we'd just leave well enough alone. Thanks for the letter which we're sure will encourage asparagus fern farmers everywhere.

NOW A WEE BIT MORE TO PUT IN SPORRAN?

CANBERRA (Reuter)—The cost of living may be rising but for Scotsmen living in exile in Australia things may be a little easier—the government has lifted the import duty on sporrans.

The sporrán, a mainly decorative purse worn around the waist on a belt over the kilt, is an essential part of any Scots' national dress. But those living in Australia have had to pay a 33-per-cent tax on the genuine article, made in Scotland from sealskin and imported.

The decision to lift the tax was announced in the government Gazette.

Next Meal the Last? A Nagging Suspicion

By RUTH FREMES-AND ZAK SABRY

Will processed foods hurt us? That's a question that nutritionists are asked repeatedly. Currently, there is a nagging suspicion in the minds of most North Americans that their next meal may be their last.

The processed food question is not one that you can answer with a simple yes or no. And, here's one reason why. Go to your kitchen cupboards and check the numbers of products that contain any ingredient with phosphate as a part of it. That done? O.K. You probably found, as we have, that there are a large number — from Cream of Wheat to Coke. Well...are phosphates harmful?

No. Not individually. Any laboratory tests would show that single doses of phosphates are harmless. But, the effect of the constant addition of phosphates to our bodies in foods such as jelly powders, breakfast cereals, soft drinks and soups cannot be tested. Our population is doing something that's never been done before, eating large amounts of phosphate. In earlier days we ate phosphorus as it occurred naturally, in meat for example.

We know that the body uses phosphorus in a direct relationship with calcium. For every phosphorus we need one calcium. The current nutritional thinking is that if we take excess phosphorus from our food without calcium, we'll take the calcium from our bones. And the resultant disease could be a condition, commonly found in the aged, osteoporosis.

Osteoporosis is a disease of the bones which is common to the elderly. Although it is known to begin in early life, science has been unable to establish the cause. We have all witnessed its effect, however. A fall or a twist and a bone is fractured. It takes ages to heal and it never feels the way it used to. The reason is related to bone structure.

If we could see it, we would realize that bone is porous just like unglazed pottery, and the reason it becomes porous, is that the bone has lost calcium. The loss of calcium from bones used to be regarded as an inevitable sign of old age, but that inevitability is in question now. The work by Dr. Harold Draper at the University of Guelph is looking at the link between the increase in the consumption of processed foods, the subsequent rise in the diet of phosphates and the development of an imbalance in the calcium-phosphorus ratio in the body. Here is how it works.

Bone is made up mainly of calcium and phosphorus. Both must come from the foods we eat. Milk has both in the right combination perfect for growing children. If our diets become high in calcium the body has the mechanism for phosphorus, particularly for phosphates, like those added to processed foods. So, if we eat foods high in phosphates, blood phosphorus will rise. Dr. Draper and his fellow researchers found that when this happens a hormone from the parathyroid gland is released and the hormone leeches calcium out of the bone and into the blood to match the rise in blood phosphorus. This action may well be a major factor in the weakening of the bone structure that leads to osteoporosis.

Dr. Draper's experiments showed that there is a difference between the phosphorus naturally in our foods and the inorganic phosphates that are added to processed foods. Phosphorus in natural foods is not as readily absorbed by the body as the inorganic phosphates so it doesn't raise the level of blood phosphorus nor cause the removal of calcium from the bone as much.

The significance of this work is considerable. Phosphates are allowed in many foods. They are added to gelatin desserts, instant puddings, soft drinks, instant breakfast, fruit-flavoured crystals, many breakfast cereals, ready-to-bake rolls and all sorts of other food. These phosphates are perfectly safe to add to any food, but when they are added to so many foods, the phosphate consumption creeps up and the effects, according to Dr. Draper's research, are far reaching.

So — are processed foods harmful? Not singly, but in quantity over a long time span, they probably are. Natural foods should provide the major portion of anyone's diet and milk should be included every day in everyone's meal plan.

Junk Food Junkie Hits Close to Home

But when that clock strikes midnight and I'm all by myself I work that combination on my secret hideaway shelf and pull out those Fritos Corn Chips, Dr. Pepper and O'moon pie.

Then I sit back in glorious expectation of a genuine junk food high.

By MIMI SHERATON

This confession, sung in a clanging, twanging style by Larry Groce, is a verse of his current hit, "Junk Food Junkie," a maverick recording that fits no hard and fast music classification and which suddenly appeared among the hits on pop, country and western and easy listening or M.O.R. (Middle of the Road) lists of record sales.

Judging by its widespread popularity, the song hits close to home, proving there is a little of the junk food junkie in all of us, health-food fan and gastronome alike. And like Groce's daytime Mr. Natural, whose Jekyll turns to Hyde at night when he breaks out the Hostess Twinkies and Pringles, we thought some of the leading members of the food establishment might be relieved to confess to similar gastronomic skeletons in their otherwise impeccable cupboards.

When reached by telephone at 9 o'clock on a weekday morning, Julia Child said she and her husband Paul were having one of their favorite breakfasts — two oysters each and some orange juice.

"Well, I do love tuna fish sandwiches," Mrs. Child began, "and also chocolate ice cream sodas, peanut butter, which I resist, and those cute little goldfish crackers people serve with cocktails. And then, of course, hot dogs and hamburgers with onion, pickles and ketchup."

"I'm a hot dog fiend," James Beard proudly announced, almost before the question was completed. "I used to buy them from street corner stands, but I don't do that anymore. Aside from those, I like all of them, all ways. I love them for breakfast, too, but I boil them then."

"I'm also queer for carbonated water, Hershey almond bars and marshmallows — I eat those raw, right out of the bag. Did you know marshmallows aren't fattening? Each one has only 20 calories."

Almost any hot dogs and hamburgers "dripping" with ketchup, and Hershey almond bars, are also among Craig Claiborne's junk food fancies. "I love sandwiches, too," he added, "especially heroes, Reubens, pastrami, corned beef, liverwurst with onions, chopped liver and chopped eggs and onions. I also like garlic pickles, beer and pizza."

Marcella Hazan, author of "The Classic Italian Cookbook" and teacher at one of New York City's most popular cooking schools, confessed to a passion for potato chips.

"I love them with vermouth tell you the name because he always gets them for me."

When Kazan called, he reported that the brand is Charles. "Marcella eats other kinds, of course, but never the newfangled type," he said.

Calvin Trillin, whose book, "American Fried," is virtually a celebration of the most plebeian and earthy of our native dishes, said "To me, junk food always comes in packages. Like the hamburgers at fast-food places, like Hydrox sandwich cookies, Not Oreo's. For some reason Oreos achieved the semantic high ground, but the Hydrox cookies are far superior."

Unreasonable Request

DEAR ABBY: Irving and I have been married for a little over a year. It's the second marriage for both of us.

First, I want it clearly understood that I had nothing to do with breaking up Irving's 21-year-old marriage. When I went to work for his company, his marriage was already turning sour even though he was still living at home for appearance's sake.

The problem: Irving's business is named after his ex-wife. She never was in the business and contributed nothing to its success. It has grown into a multimillion-dollar corporation, and Irving owns it all. (He manufactures a commercial product that bears his ex-wife's name, and I detest the sound of it!)

I have asked Irving to change the name of the company because it upsets me to hear it. He says I am asking him to do a most unreasonable thing because it would cost a fortune to change the name now, and he simply cannot do it.

Abby, I know he can do it if he really wants to. Am I wrong to insist on this one, favor?

favor? NUMBER TWO.

DEAR NUMBER TWO: Being a business woman you should know how costly and impractical changing the name of a successfully established product would be. I suggest you go to work on changing your attitude.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl with a very upsetting problem, but I can't tell anyone because they wouldn't believe me.

My dad comes into my bedroom during the night and plays with my body. I get so scared I don't know what to do. I was going to tell my mom, but she would be so hurt, and I don't know if she would even believe me.

My dad acts like nothing has happened the next day, and I can't even stand the sight of him anymore.

Don't tell me to talk to a counselor or a preacher. I wouldn't be able to look anybody in the face and talk about it.

Please tell me what to do. He doesn't use any precautions, and I am afraid I might get pregnant.

I can't give you my name because I don't want to cause any trouble and don't want to be disgraced. CAN'T TALK.

DEAR CAN'T: You must tell your mother at once! If she doesn't believe you, call the Child Protective Services unit of your County Welfare or Probation Department and tell them that Abby told you to call. Then tell them the whole story.

Your father is a very sick man and needs treatment. Please act at once and let me know immediately what happens. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school principal who has had it up to here with thoughtless parents who just pop in at their convenience for a special conference.

Will you please ask parents who want to discuss a problem concerning their child to phone for an appointment or write a note?

Other professionals do not accept walk-in conferences except in cases of emergency. Last week I had 16 walk-in meetings with parents! My time is scheduled, and I just

The pill is the most effective birth prevention method. However, side effects have created concern about the pill's safety when it is used over a prolonged period.

The information presented in the 4-page folder "About The Pill" summarizes the current knowledge of the pill's potential health hazards.

The folder states, for instance, research studies have shown that the risk of death as a result of pregnancy is greater than the risk of dying due to blood clot caused by the pill.

The folder also explains how the pill works and answers questions such as: Does the pill cause high blood pressure? Does the pill cause cancer? (So far research does not show any relationship between the use of oral contraceptives and cancer). Does the pill cause jaundice? Does it cause diabetes? Can older women take the pill?

To the question does the pill affect sexual desire, the folder replies that in most cases an increase in the frequency of intercourse occurs. However, there is a small group of women whose sexual appetite is suppressed by the pill. In such cases the doctor can suggest another birth control method.

Kitchen Gadgets Galore —And a Few Are Gems

By MIMI SHERATON

Because it is at least part craft, cookery inspires a seemingly endless array of gadgets, most of which prove to be overdesigned, overspecialized and unworkable. The following, however, are exceptions, all well worth the cupboard space they occupy and the purchaser prices they command.

One of the simplest and most efficient kitchen utensils to come along in quite a while is Fat-A-Way, a graduated Pyrex beaker. Pour pan juices in and, as the fat rises to the top, the greaseless juices sink to the bottom and are then poured off through the low-set spout.

In addition to this basic use, Fat-A-Way simplifies the task of clarifying butter or other solid fats by a quick and almost foolproof method described in an instruction sheet that accompanies it. Since the glass is flameproof, it can be used to boil water, and because its slender spout has a precisely formed lip, it pours water neatly into steam irons, or directly onto the soil of bushy potted plants.

The plastic handle is well-angled for comfortable gripping, and if there is one improvement possible, it would be the addition of a lid to keep liquids warm. A long thin brush is available for thorough cleaning of the spout.

While there are a number of convenient utensils with which to grate cheese in quantity for kitchen use, it is more difficult to find a practical, small grater attractive enough to go to the table where it can be used to grate cheese directly and freshly on to pasta, soup or salads.

One very satisfactory answer to that need is Mely-Roll, a substantial, fluted rotating grater that works much like a peppermill, and which now comes with its own fitted saucer to catch random flecks of cheese. Although made in bright kitchen colors such as red, blue, green and yellow it is most elegantly ceramic-like in white. It is made in Italy and is useful also for grating chocolate over desserts.

The simpler a dish is, the narrower the margin for error in producing it, and when it comes to something with as few ingredients as the classic vinaigrette dressing, all must be first rate. It seems one can get more opinions on the salt, pepper, and type of oil to use in that dressing than the vinegar, yet the relative richness and mellowness of that all-important ingredient is vital to a successful result.

For that reason, many devout food buffs have vinegar bottles, containing vinegar starters or mothers, to which they add dribblings of leftover table wines to keep the supply replenished. Nature does the rest with enzymes from the mother that turn the new wine into vinegar.

The Perpetual Vinegar Cask, made by Franjo Celars in California, offers an attractive, convenient and practical container in which to make your own vinegar, perpetually, as the name suggests.

The handmade oak cask with brass-studded hoops comes not only with a full-fledged working mother, but with a starter supply of vinegar made for the most part of red zinfandel wine and which has a mouth-puckering, tantalizing piquant bouquet and flavor. After that you're on your own, and can deepen the flavor, by using some of your best bordeaux and burgundy vintages, if you like.

A spigot through which the vinegar can be drawn off, and a funnel for tidy refilling, are included in the package.

New York Times

BOGOTA (NYT) — On the big board that traces international coffee quotations at the Colombian National Coffee Growers Federation here, the price lines have literally gone through the ceiling.

Dozens of delegates to the federation's national congress, representing this country's 200,000 coffee growers, stared at the board as green, red and yellow graph lines, representing various grades of mild coffee, hit the top mark of $1.20 a pound, with no room to go higher.

"We didn't plan on this. We need a new board," said a federation economist, as the delegates speculated on how much higher coffee prices would go in the present boom.

Colombia, with an exportable production of 7.5 million bags this year, is one of the major beneficiaries of the coffee price rise, which is mainly a result of severe frost damage that decimated some of Brazil's major coffee-growing regions last year.

The export prices now for Colombian mild coffee beans of nearly $1.30 a pound is the highest in history. Coffee export income should exceed $1 billion this year, up from $800 million last year.

Arturo Gomez Jaramillo, general manager of the Coffee Growers Federation, an authority on world coffee trade, said that for the coming coffee years, beginning July 1, the supply of new coffee worldwide would be only 49 million bags, for an expected demand of 55 million bags.

"There has been a belated awareness in the market that there just are not enough reserves in Brazil or anywhere else to close the gap," said Gomez Jaramillo.

Pollution Charge Faces CP Transport

NANAIMO — CP Transport will be taken to court over the transfer of sulphur compounds without the proper permits, members of the Naimo Regional Board planning committee have been told.

Gordon Summers, planning director, said that he had contracted the Pollution Control Board about the transfer operations taking place at Bryn Sliding in Nanose, and was told what kind of evidence to obtain for the Board so it could prosecute.

The CPR has not obtained PCB's permission for the transfer of sulphur from bulk cars to tank trucks at the Bryn site.

"I have a witness and photos of the transfer taking place," Summers said, "and the PCB has indicated it will prosecute."

Sulphuric acid is also being transferred from bulk cars to tank trucks at the site, an operation which normally requires a public health permit, but the public health branch has so far not indicated a willingness to take on the CPR in court.

Free Chickens On Saturday?

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Arnold Link said today he may start giving away his chickens as early as Saturday because the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board has refused to consider a compromise offer by northern egg producers.

Al Yablonski, B.C. Egg Marketing Board general manager, announced Monday the board has rejected the producers' compromise offer.

"The board cannot negotiate anything and is going along with the court's decision," he said.

On April 13, the B.C. Supreme Court in Vancouver told northern egg producers to either pay outstanding levies, about $100,000, owed to the board or risk being shut down. The levies were assessed for production exceeding quotas set by the provincial board.

Producers responded with a counter offer that they would pay the levies if three conditions were met. That offer was rejected.

Link, who owes about $19,000 in outstanding levies to the Egg Board, said he cannot afford to pay and will not let the marketing board seize or destroy his chickens.

"I can't understand how a powerful monopoly can destroy a man's life's work. At least in a Communist country they tell you right from the beginning that you have no rights," he said.

The Prince George Labor Council today backed producers' demands for a royal commission into the marketing of eggs in B.C.

DECISION RESERVED ON PANÇO

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Marketing Board reserved decision Tuesday on an appeal by Panco Poultry Ltd. for reinstatement of production quota cancelled by the B.C. Turkey Marketing Board.

George Okulitch, chairman of the B.C. Marketing Board, which oversees all provincial marketing boards, did not say when a decision would be made.

Panco was bought by the former New Democratic Party government in December, 1974, for about $10 million, and has been in dispute with the turkey board since that time.

$138,789 Suit in Oak Bay Blast

Toy maker John Hertzberg Tuesday placed before the Supreme Court of B.C. a statement of claim for $138,789 in damages resulting from a gas explosion and fire on Oak Bay Avenue in the fall of 1973.

The case before Chief Justice Nathaniel Nemetz is one of a series of suits against B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, general contractor Dillingham Corp. and subcontractor Webb and Trace, who were engaged in trenching for underground services when a building at 1834 Oak Bay blew up Sept. 26, 1973.

Two of the plaintiffs have agreed to an out-of-court settlement reached in chambers and adjourned pending the fixing of a sum.

Court was told liability is not at issue in the cases starting with Hertzberg and his wife and business partner, Deborah, who operated The Toy Shop at that address, adjoining Renee's Beauty Parlor and the shoe repair shop of Perikles Parisis, the only person hurt in the blast.

A separate suit is being argued on behalf of Parisis because personal injuries as well as general damages are involved.

The cases involving building owner Irene Randall and beauty shop operator Mary Couper are those settled out-of-court.

Court was told the Hertzbergs had opened and operated their specialty toy shop at the address for four years and considered it successfully established when they decided to take a holiday after Labor Day and annual stock-taking. The blast occurred when they were away. When they returned to the city, firemen were still soaking the smouldering ruin of shops and part of a next-door Ukrainian church which has since been demolished.

Counsel J. J. Gow said the toy shop was gutted; "four years' work lay in ruins." The effect upon Hertzberg was "devastating," and he was "sunk in gloom," which culminated three months later in him leaving his wife, Gow said.

Efforts both by Mrs. Hertzberg and her husband, at different periods, to restore the business proved prohibitive at then current rentals. But in 1974, Hertzberg bought the site of the former shop and erected a new two-storey building, enabling him to resume his business again last fall, despite the loss of his wife's artistic flair and help.

The statement of claim entered against the defendants is that by reason of negligence the plaintiffs suffered total loss of fittings, furnishings, fixtures, and income, and were deprived of business goodwill, the unexpired portion of their lease, personal property and were caused suffering.

The court was to hear the defendants' case as presented today by Ken Murphy, for Webb and Trace, and Bruce Harvey, for Dillingham Corp.

b.c. briefs

Charge Laid In Jones Fatality

COQUITLAM (CP) — Janine Darlene Grams, 29, of Burnaby, was charged Tuesday with two counts of criminal negligence as the result of a traffic accident March 26.

Rick Jones, 19, of Victoria, died April 2 of head injuries suffered in the two-car collision. Denise Holst, 18, of White Rock, a passenger in Jones' car, suffered neck injuries. Jones, in his second year at Simon Fraser University, was a starting quarterback for the university's football team last fall. No court date has been set.

Relations Improve

VANCOUVER (CP) — There are highly encouraging signs of better labor-management relations in the port of Vancouver, and strong evidence that the port is entering an era of greater cooperation, Port Manager Fred Spoke said Tuesday.

The extent of labor unrest in the port has been exaggerated, Spoke told a service club, and mutual understanding is growing.

There is a sincere desire, lacking in the past, to resolve labor-management problems by grappling with them on a continuing basis, he said.

Ear Bank Success

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Andris Bokmanis, a Vancouver ear specialist, said Tuesday the British Columbia ear bank has become so successful that in June it will be able to provide internal parts of human ears for transplant to anywhere in Canada.

Dr. Bokmanis said the bank is used to provide parts of healthy ears for transplant and to obtain damaged ear mechanisms for study into reasons of hearing loss.

Little Response

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal transport ministry spokesman said Tuesday that public response to a report on expansion of Vancouver International Airport has been disappointing and only a small percentage of what was expected. W. H. S. Neales, Pacific regional administrator of the Canadian Air Transportation Administration, said only about a dozen briefs have been submitted in response to the airport planning committee's report on airport expansion.

Pollution Spill

PEACHLAND (CP) — Bill Castelan, area manager for the Pollution Control Board, said Tuesday that there was a spill last week of about 2,000 gallons of polluted water at the Brenda Mines container pond near here. He said the water got into two creeks and a full investigation by his department has been launched.

Liquor Ban Lifted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Federation of Labor Tuesday announced that the ban of handling products from Park and Tilford distillery has been lifted following settlement of a lengthy dispute between the company and Local 300 of the Brewery Workers' Union.

HOSTAGE TAKERS 'NOT DANGEROUS'

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Tuesday that the latest hostage-taking incident at the British Columbia Penitentiary was unpredictable because it involved prisoners who were not considered dangerous.

"Their criminal patterns did not indicate they would act this way," Allmand said of two prisoners who held two prison workers hostage overnight Saturday.

Both were allowed to use knives for work on hobbies because they were not considered high-security risks, he told reporters.

They later used the hobby knives as weapons.

Allmand said he does not consider the latest incident similar to five others that took place at the prison during the last 14 months.

If it had involved dangerous criminals, it would be necessary to say: "What the hell is wrong?"

But "this one is a different kind."

Allmand said it will only be possible to determine why the two prisoners asked to be transferred to another institution — the regional psychiatric centre at Matsqui, B.C. — when an investigation now being conducted is completed.

As it was, the two were being held in a segregated area in the B.C. Penitentiary to protect them from other prisoners.

Allmand said he was not certain how to prevent similar incidents without keeping all prisoners in their cells at all times.

The two men released their hostages unharmed after holding them for about 14 hours.

Vancouver Tax Hike 9.95%

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council approved its 1976 budget Tuesday, including a 9.95 per cent tax increase that had been suggested earlier by city staff.

Council approved a general-purposes property tax rate of 19 mills, compared with 17.28 mills last year.

City manager Lorne Ryan said in a report to council that the new mill rate will mean total general purpose taxes of about $430 on the average single-family home, an increase of $39 over last year.

WCB Expenses Nearly Double

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Employers Council of British Columbia has offered to meet with labor representatives to discuss the cost of the Workers' Compensation Board.

President Bill Hamilton said the council would be glad to discuss the WCB with unions after publication of reports on the board from two consulting firms hired by the provincial government.

The reports on the administrative and actuarial costs of the WCB are expected to be completed in June.

Hamilton said that during the 1974-75 period, the income of the WCB rose by 50 per cent, expenditures increased by 90 per cent and accident claims eight per cent.

He said the claims increased at the same rate as the B.C. work force but the objective should be to reduce the ratio between the two.

M-B Brass Faces the Music

VANCOUVER (CP) — Management of Macmillan Bloedel Ltd. faced the music Tuesday for last year's loss at the annual shareholders' meeting.

Chairman and acting president J. Ernest Richardson told a packed meeting of about 600 people that Macmillan Bloedel is in a sound financial position. He said a search continues for a new chief executive officer.

Referring to the firings in March of president Denis Timmis and chairman George Currie, Richardson said: "Apart from the transportation losses, the board felt a progressive erosion of confidence in its two top executives."

"They did not always communicate fully with other directors in several areas of corporate affairs and it was a combination of these circumstances which culminated in the board's decision of March 26."

He said the Mac Blo situation was made worse by what has now come to be recognized as poor implementation of the fleet expansion policy.

"Although it must be remembered that many matters become much clearer with the benefit of hindsight, the senior management and the transportation group management in place at the time misjudged a number of key factors such as the ability of tankers to be converted quickly to the carriage of dry bulk cargoes, the reaction of governments to continuing inflation and so on."

Richardson said the policy of diversification had also led to the formation of the ventures group to make investments in smaller companies with prospects for growth in areas not always related to Macmillan Bloedel's basic business.

"Because of the recession, several of these investments, too, failed to measure up to expectations and in 1975 provision was made for write-off amounting to $5.1 million."

"It might be asked why the board entered into these ventures and the simple answer is that individuals with special knowledge in these areas together with senior management were able to show evidence of a profit potential and the board accepted the weight of such evidence."

Richardson said the company was faced with "totally unacceptable" wage demands which had led to a "most debilitating three-months' strike."

The economic turnaround while not as robust as one might have hoped, had nonetheless occurred. "Housing starts are up in our most important market, the United States, and pulp, paper, liner board and packing product demand is definitely sure signs of recovery."

THE GABARDINE SUIT TO BUY WHEN YOU DON'T WANT TO SPEND $300

This Leishman gabardine suit on a normal Tip Top day is tagged at $199.95. At that, it's still among the best suit values in the country. But we'd like you to try it on during the next ten days. Then, it's reduced by $30 to $169.98.

Now, we know as well as anyone that there are suits around today for less money. They come with a jacket, a pair of pants and sometimes, even a vest. But the similarity to our Leishman suit ends there.

Ours is 100% pure virgin wool gabardine. A quality cloth usually reserved for $300 suits.

Meticulous tailoring from the pique stitching on the jacket and vest to the co-ordinated lining. Centre-vented jacket with deeply notched lapels. Open patch pockets.

Altogether, a very well-dressed look.

How can we afford all this attention to details? We make the suits in our own factory, and avoid buying from 'outside'. This way, we're giving you a lot of fashion for a lot less than you might otherwise have to pay.

A Leishman gabardine suit of pure wool will keep its neat good looks for seasons.

Top Festival Marks Go to Adjudicator

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

One of the notable performances in the 1976 Victoria Music Festival is the one being offered by Highland dance adjudicator Loree Vellner.

With a striking combination of knowledge, wit and kindness, she is providing young Highlander dancers with meticulous, clearly worded adjudications and demonstrations of a kind to leave an indelible impression.

While minutely critical, she is also encouraging and is well pleased with the generally high standard she has found here.

The Highland dance section of the festival ends today in St. John's Memorial Hall, but hopefully there will be many more dancers next year, including group entries in addition to the solos if a more suitable location can be found.

"It's only fair to the dancers to provide them with a stage," said Ms. Vellner. "They can't do their job as well as they could if they had a proper distance between themselves and their audience."

One of the highlights of Tuesday's session was what Ms. Vellner called "a most exquisite performance" by Kerri Monk in the baby class for under sevens.

Conservative markings of vocal adjudicator Robert Irwin shot up dramatically Tuesday evening when duetists Hilary and Madeleine Gross performed. Calling their work "exquisite," he said it was exactly how a duet should be with two matched voiced coupled with two matched musical minds. He felt that 95 marks was not too high a score for such a performance.

The male operatic class brought out four fine singers, two of whom the adjudicator felt, possessed true operatic calibre. Tenor Robert Hall was named the winner with tenor Robert Hazard as runner up.

One of any festival's most prestigious classes is the lieder or German art song class in which both singer and pianist are customarily adjudicated.

"Lieder calls for the very best singing and the most artistic piano playing possible," said Irwin.

Eight singer-pianist pairs entered and there was not a poor performance among them. Most warranted marks in the high 80s but one — soprano Corinne Eckert and pianist Kristine Beny — topped the class with a 93.

Runner-up was a lovely mezzo named Joice Milliken who, with Jean Walkinshaw at the piano, was awarded an 89. Susan Word with Mary Des Roches was third and only one mark behind.

Too many music lovers are missing these outstanding sessions which, considering the low admission charge, are certainly the greatest bargains of the year. Such fine performers deserve attention.

Many of the same competitors will be appearing at tonight's vocal session when musical comedy, male oratorio and female operatic classes will take place at First United Fellowship Hall.

At Oak Bay Junior Secondary this evening, school string groups and orchestras will perform and the major string solo event for the Congress of Strings scholarships will take place.

Open and senior classes in speech arts will occupy the evening at Newcombe Auditorium. Speech arts continues through Thursday, concluding with the speech honor performance at 8 p.m.

Strings classes also conclude Thursday at Christ Church Cathedral Memorial Hall. The program, starting at 7:30 p.m., includes Frana Colquhoun's Studio Composite Group of Suzuki players and an open performance class.

Accordian classes begin Thursday at St. John Hall.

Accused Seek Second Trial Without Jury

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)

— Dennis John Moore, 23, and Jane Turner, 21, both of Victoria, applied Monday to have their second trial on a drug charge heard by a county court judge without a jury.

They were charged April 20, 1975, with illegally importing 78 pounds of marijuana into Canada from the United States across the border near Douglas.

At their first trial earlier this year, they elected trial by judge and a jury. The jury failed to reach a verdict after deliberating for close to 12 hours, and Judge D. E. McTaggart declared a mistrial.

The application for a judge-only trial was heard by county court Judge John Douglas McKinnon. He reserved decision to an unspecified date.

The defence request was opposed by Crown counsel L. W. Goulet, who maintained the Crown had not been given the necessary 14 days notice.

The accused will appear again May 31 when a trial date is to be set.

Players Blinded

Times News Services

TORONTO — A total of 57 young hockey players in Canada have been made legally blind in one eye as a result of on-ice injuries, a Toronto symposium on blindness has been told.

Dr. Robert Pashby told the symposium that for every six eye injuries in hockey, one leads to blindness.

Although there is no way of telling if the rate of eye injuries in hockey had increased in recent years, there is a suspicion that it has.

The role of sticks in eye injuries is documented by studies of more than 500 reports submitted by ophthalmologists between 1972 and 1975.

In two seasons surveyed during that period, hockey sticks accounted for 74 and 63 per cent of the eye injuries, respectively.

Soliah Facing New Trial

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Steven Soliah, found not guilty in a federal bank-robbery trial, may still face charges of harboring his underground lover, Patricia Hearst.

Federal prosecutors in San Francisco declined Tuesday to rule out the possibility that charges of aiding the newspaper heiress will be reinstated against the 27-year-old housepainter.

Soliah, who lived with Miss Hearst during her last days as a fugitive, was charged with harboring her when they were arrested Sept. 18 in San Francisco.

That charge was dropped after Soliah was indicted here for allegedly helping steal $15,000 from a Crocker National Bank branch in suburban Carmichael on April 21, 1975, the charge on which he was acquitted Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Miss Hearst's lawyer has accused U.S. marshals of driving her into a sullen "emotional collapse" on the eve of the tests that may determine her time behind bars.

By whisking her unexpectedly about California for two days, federal marshals reenacted in her mind the kidnapping that began her troubles, attorney Al Johnson said, Tuesday.

The 22-year-old heiress was driven secretly Tuesday from a federal facility near San Francisco to the Metropolitan Correctional Centre to begin 90 days of court ordered psychiatric tests.

Two carloads of marshals armed with shotguns and carbines escorted Miss Hearst, with her arms chained to her sides, on a day-long drive to San Diego.

She arrived looking tired. Marshals said she had refused lunch, taking only some sips of coffee during the 500-mile trip.

The day before she was transferred on a few minutes notice from a hospital in Redwood City, where she was treated for a lung ailment and malnutrition, to the minimum security facility at Pleasanton.

REAL POLICE PROTECTION

STOCKHOLM — Police covering the concert given by British pop star David Bowie did not hear a thing — they all wore anti noise ear-muffs. It is the first time they have ever been issued to police here, a spokesman said. The idea was to protect the men from pop music decibels.

Four Forces Men Given Awards for Merit people

OTTAWA — Four armed forces personnel have received public service merit awards, the defence department announced Tuesday. Petty officers Brian Walters and Edward Greenfield, both of Halifax, received $1,000 and $750 respectively for their work in putting back into operation part of a turbine generator on the destroyer Athabaskan at Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, in February, 1974. Master Warrant Officer Kenneth McIntosh of the forces base in Falconbridge, Ont., received a $1,000 award for drawing up a manpower evaluating team for radar stations. George McAdam, a civilian employee, received $500 for 27 years of community and social work in and around the base at Station Aldergrove in British Columbia's Fraser Valley.

NOTTINGHAM, England — A Pakistani who held up a factory's production line while he prayed five times a day on his knees, was justly dismissed from his job, an industrial tribunal decided Tuesday. The tribunal was told that Abdul Rashid felt obliged by his religion to stop work at set times and pray for up to half an hour. Workmates worried about losing bonuses because the production line was help up while Rashid prayed.

BEERSHEBA, Israel — A judge has ordered Nathan Vesker held for eight days for investigation of charges that he set fire to the door of the apartment of a policeman who gave him a traffic ticket. Vesker told the court Tuesday he could not have set the fire because he was in a military jail on another charge at the time.

BELGRADE — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev will pay an official visit to Yugoslavia in the coming weeks, Yugoslav and Soviet diplomatic sources disclosed Tuesday. The unexpected decision presumably reflects willingness on both sides to reduce growing friction in bilateral relations.

WASHINGTON — The Most Rev. William Baum, Archbishop of Washington, was named a Cardinal Tuesday by Pope Paul. At 49, he is one of the youngest prelates in recent history to be named a prince of the Church. Baum was the only North American on the list of 19 new cardinals.

BOSTON — Caroline Kennedy has entered New England Baptist Hospital for a "routine physical checkup." She interrupted a 10-month art course in London to fly to Boston for the hospital stay.

NASHVILLE — George Jones says he's fought his battle with the bottle and won. "I finally realized something," the 44-year-old country singer said. "I realized I just couldn't hold it. I just couldn't take it."

SEXIEST BODY PART? IT'S THE LOWLY FOOT

HINGHAM, Mass. (UPI) — The next time you put your shoes on, you may be covering the sexiest part of your body, says a former podiatrist who has written a book about the role feet and shoes have on our sexual lives.

"The foot is the mother of human sexuality and is responsible for the emergence of most of the erotic zones of the body," Dr. William Rossi says.

Rossi, 57, currently a marketing counselor for the footwear industry, has written a book called "The Sex Life of the Foot and Shoe." In the book, published Monday, he claims feet have been responsible for many love affairs through the ages.

"Without the feet the human figure as we know it would not exist. The legs, breasts, thighs, pelvis, hips, buttocks, back, neck and even facial expressions, in short everything men and women find interesting in each other, would not be so nice, to look at," he said.

Cable TV May Finance Improved Programs

OTTAWA (CP) — Private television broadcasters say they are looking to cable and pay television for the money they will need to survive.

In a day of debate over the future of their industry, members of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters agreed Tuesday with government critics that major improvement in program quality is a top priority and that cable and pay TV will have to finance some of it.

"If I were you, I'd be home right now trying to make deals with satellite stations and cable companies," retired broadcaster Spence Caldwell of Toronto, a founder of CTV Television Network Ltd., told a CAB meeting on the future of English-language television.

Caldwell said Communication Minister Jeanne Sauve's offer to the CAB Monday to consider allowing over-the-air broadcasters to buy cable companies, was one of the most definite government proposals he has heard on the issue.

"I'd be home buying cable companies as fast as I could," he said.

The association, representing about 270 private television and radio stations across the country, was told Tuesday that pay television and growth of cable inevitably will make new inroads into broadcasters' audiences and profits.

The broadcasters agreed with Mrs. Sauve and Harry Boyle, chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission that they had to fight back by making major improvements in program quality to compete with popular U.S. shows.

They said new financing formulas, adding some revenues from cable and pay TV to existing advertising revenues, must be developed to pay for the improvements.

The broadcasters said cable will continue to grow and bring in more distant programming to compete with local broadcasters in response to public demand. They also said pay TV systems, already being set up without CRTC approval in apartment buildings in Toronto, soon will spread across the country. Ron Mitchell of CKY-TV, Winnipeg, said similar activity is taking place there.

The broadcasters were enthusiastic about Mrs. Sauve's proposal which would relax CRTC restrictions on cross-ownership between conventional television and cable.

She said the change will be made only if broadcasters use added revenue from cable operations to pay for improved domestic programming.

James Purvis, vice-president and general manager of CKY, said domestic broadcasters must improve their drama, comedy and variety programming through a transfer of money from the cable industry to the production industry.

PRICE FEAR INCREASES COFFEE SALES

TORONTO (CP) — Coffee sales have increased since a recent announcement that higher coffee prices are expected next month, supermarket officials say.

Sam Crystal, vice-president of public affairs for the Oshawa Group Ltd., said the company has begun to draw from its warehouse because of increased sales.

Jack Higginson, manager of consumer relations at Dominion Stores Ltd., said ground coffee advertised at $1.33 a pound last week caused "a tremendous surge in sales."

Recently-announced wholesale price increases may mean a rise in coffee prices for consumers when current inventories are depleted at the end of May.

Censor Plea Before Court

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada agreed Tuesday to decide the controversial question of whether the provinces may censor movies.

The high court granted the Nova Scotia attorney-general's department leave to appeal a lower court judgment that movie censorship is beyond provincial jurisdiction.

The Nova Scotia Supreme Court appeal division ruled in February that censorship is not within provincial power because fundamental freedoms can be constrained only by federal legislation. That ruling overturned a decision by the Nova Scotia Amusements Regulations Board to ban the film, Last Tango in Paris, from Nova Scotia theatres.

Behind the legal action is Canadian Press Ottawa reporter Gerard McNeil, editor of the weekly Dartmouth, N.S., Free Press when he filed a lawsuit claiming the board had no authority to censor the movie.

Lawyers for Nova Scotia argue that Parliament does not have exclusive right to create censorship laws. The basic argument is that censorship relates to property and civil rights, areas of provincial jurisdiction. Nova Scotia says the provinces should control obnoxious matter because they already have such power in relation to libel and slander.

The provincial appeal court did not accept this argument. The federal government has not enacted any laws for the censorship of films or printed matter. However, the lower court said certain provisions of the Criminal Code, the Post Office Act and the Customs Tariff Act indicate Ottawa already has entered this field.

The Criminal Code contains regulations of fundamental freedom of expression and under the Post Office Act, the postmaster-general can refuse to deliver certain mail. The Customs Tariffs Act prohibits goods considered treasonable or seditious or morally indecent.

The Nova Scotia appeal court said the case is the first of its kind in the country. The Quebec Censorship Law was challenged in 1944, but the action was discontinued before it got to trial.

The high court likely will hear the appeal some time next fall.

In another ruling Tuesday, the high court agreed to decide the Alberta-Ottawa quarrel over the province's purchase of Pacific Western Airlines.

It granted leave Tuesday for the province to appeal a Federal Court of Appeal judgment that said air regulations concerning airline purchases do apply to a provincial government.

Job Cuts At Paper

WASHINGTON (AP) - The

financially-troubled Washington Star signed contract agreements Tuesday with 10 unions calling for job cuts and a wage freeze. Management and union leaders are confident the accords "will assure the survival of the newspaper," the newspaper said. Publisher Joe Albritton said the contracts will save the Star about $6 million.

Gas-Teargas Battle

Cash Pours in to Pay Gypped Hiker

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A bar room bet has snowballed to encompass the honor of two countries, three states, the Alaska legislature and a bush pilot from Chick, Alaska.

Centre of the controversy is Paul Roberts, a black former Green Beret paratrooper who came to Alaska from Honolulu last month looking for a job on the trans-Alaska pipeline project.

Since then, he says he has walked 750 miles through the American and Canadian wilderness because 11 anonymous Alaskans promised him $5,000 if he completed the journey from Anchorage to Keno Hill, Y.T., in 48 days.

He made it in 36½ — and now, six days after he arrived at his destination, the journey appears to have been the easiest part of the bargain.

Roberts, 32, left Anchorage March 17 on the strength of what he later called a "dumb bar room bet" with Alaskans originally from Seattle, Dallas, Tulsa and Los Angeles. They challenged him to walk the 750 miles without hitchhiking or cross-country skiing and with only $100 in his pocket.

"The rules said anything else goes," Roberts said in a telephone interview Tuesday from Mayo Landing, Y.T.

When he completed the trip last Thursday he went to pick up the cashier's cheque at Mayo Landing but the envelope which had been held for weeks by the RCMP contained only two $1 bills and a note filled with racial slurs.

But Tuesday, a bush pilot who flies mail in a light plane to communities near the United States-Canadian border said he flew Roberts about 40 miles between the Alaskan communities of Chicken and Boundary. The two towns are located mid-way along Roberts' wagger route.

Roberts, however, denied the pilot's report and said the aviator flew only his pack the short distance. He maintained he fulfilled the terms of the wager.

When word of the apparent switch became public, offers of help poured in from outraged Alaskans as well as from Hawaii and Texas.

The Alaska State House passed a resolution Tuesday honoring, congratulating and apologizing to the Hawaiian because the anonymous betters failed to pay up. Legislators also have started a fund to correct the welsling, calling it "a disgrace to Alaska."

Anchorage Democrat Bob Bradley, who drew up the resolution, said "When an Alaskan gives his word in a bar room, that is approaching the altar — it is a fine old Alaska tradition."

At least $400 had been raised by the lawmakers Tuesday and money also was being gathered by students at the Juneau campus of the University of Alaska.

The note Roberts found instead of the $5,000 cheque read in part, "This will teach you a lesson about people from Texas..."

'SPECIALS' OUT

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The marine corps has abolished the "motivation platoon," a special unit for troublesome recruits which was involved in the beating death of Pvt. Lynn McClure.

McClure, 20, a mentally retarded recruit from Lufkin, Tex., died of massive brain injuries suffered in a "pugil stick" fight while he was assigned to the platoon. Recruits who were troublesome or did not keep up with regular training were assigned to the platoons in the past for special training and disciplinary attention.

U.S. COURT RULES ENTRAPMENT LEGAL

WASHINGTON (WP) — The government can furnish heroin to a person in order to convict the recipient of making an illegal heroin sale, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

By a 5-to-3 vote the court refused to set aside the drug conviction of a St. Louis man because of the government's role in the crime. What mattered was the defendant's desire to commit it, the court said.

The decision, which broadened the power of police and federal undercover agents, was an expansion on a 1973 ruling in which the court rejected the so-called entrapment defence raised in many drug cases.

In the case three years ago, federal agents furnished the defendant with a scarce but legally obtainable chemical needed to make illegal methamphetamine or "speed."

First Autopsy Missed Bullet

EDMONTON (CP) — A pathologist who performed an autopsy on the body of a Canadian Indian woman found dead Feb. 25 on a United States Indian reservation says he overlooked a bullet wound in the back of her head.

Dr. W. O. Brown of Scottsbluff, Neb., told the Edmonton Journal in a telephone interview that he missed the bullet wound and had listed Anna Mae Picotou Aquash as having died of exposure.

Several organizations based in Ontario have written a joint letter to External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen to instigate an inquiry into the matter through the U.S. government.

Ms. Aquash, 31, was from the Micmac Reserve near Antigonish, N.S. Her body was found by a rancher beside a road on the Pine Ridge Indian reservation in South Dakota. Her sister, Mary Lafford, who lives on a reserve near Afton, N.S., told the Journal Anna Mae said late last year that she feared for her life.

Dr. Brown's autopsy report said the woman died of exposure and that he found no marks of violence on the body. He also said he had opened the skull and examined the cranial cavity.

Mrs. Lafford said she doubted her sister died of exposure because of the fears she had confided. Mrs. Lafford arranged for another autopsy by Dr. Garry Peterson of St. Paul, Minn.

X-rays revealed the presence of a bullet. Dr. Peterson found a bullet wound in the back of the head.

U.S. Army Raps LSD Experiments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Intelligence-oriented experiments with the mind-affecting drug LSD violated United States defence department rules "and disregarded moral and ethical standards of conduct governing the use of humans in research," army investigators say.

This judgment is contained in a 239-page report by the army inspector-general's office on its investigation of army experiments using LSD and other hallucinogenic drugs on soldiers and others, dating back to the mid-1950s. The army last summer suspended testing of all chemical compounds on human volunteers after disclosure of LSD experiments conducted with 385 officers and enlisted men between 1956 and 1967. A spokesman said the suspension still is in effect.

A section of the report focused on three experiment operations between mid-1958 and early 1963 by U.S. intelligence and chemical corps teams, which also included medical officers.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

If one were to look at all four hands in today's deal, he would find it difficult to figure out how South went down at his four-spade contract. He had just two spade losers, and no heart, no diamonds, and no clubs (thanks to a successful club finesse). But, at the table, it was a horse of another color. And although I cannot prove it, most thinking players, had they been sitting South, would have met South's fate.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
 4 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

West didn't relish the job of selecting an opening lead out of his hand, so he flipped out the card nearest his thumb — the ten of clubs. Declarer now took a long time to reflect on the situation confronting him.

He finally concluded that, in view of the bidding (one club by South, two clubs by North), West just couldn't be leading the ten of clubs from the doubleton K-10. Thus East simply had to have the club king.

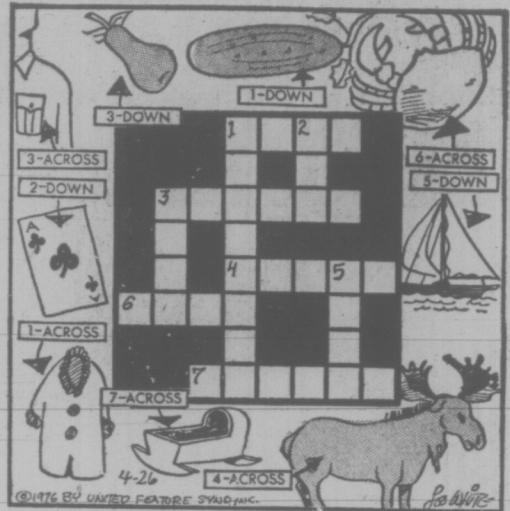

Hence, it had to be right to put up dummy's ace of clubs at trick one. If West were leading from the doubleton 10-9, then East would have the singleton king, which the ace would fell. And if East had the K-9 doubleton, then if a low club were played from dummy, East would win with the king, and return his remaining club for West to ruff.

So declarer played the ace of clubs at trick one, after which he led a low spade and finessed his queen. East captured this lead with the king, cashed the ace of hearts and king of clubs, and then exposed his hand, stating: "I get another spade trick." He was right, of course, and South incurred a one-trick set.

Had West led either of the unbid suits at trick one, South would have fulfilled his contract, for somewhere along the line he would have taken the club finesse, thus avoiding the loss of a club trick. But West's abnormal lead talked declarer out of taking the club finesse.

It should be noted that declarer also got a tough break in the trump suit. Had the adversely held trumps been divided normally (3-2), South would have lost only one trump trick.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. HUNTER

It's funny about Uncle Fred's house and ours," said Clem. "I just figured out something, Dad."

Bruce smiled. "You mean their number has the same figures as ours but in reverse order?"

"More than that," replied the boy. "Their number is 693 more than the sum of its three digits, and ours is 396 more than the sum of the three."

What was Uncle Fred's number?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: SNOW was 9300 (even).

Ottawa Softens Gun-Curb Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is firmly committed to a licensing system for rifles and shotguns but is ready to bring extensive amendments to a bill now before the Commons justice and legal affairs committee, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said Tuesday.

Allmand told the committee, during its first session on the so-called peace and security bill, that he is prepared to bring the following gun-control changes as a result of criticisms of the bill:

- Anyone residing in an area where hunting and trapping are a way of life and who must hunt for food will get a licence free. Other Canadians would pay $25 to $30 for a five-year permit. Anyone buying guns or ammunition would have to have such a permit.

- Efforts were being made to find a way to allow "bona fide and responsible" gun collectors to have machine guns, which would become prohibited weapons.

- The age below which no person might possess a firearm would be reduced to 12 years from 14 as a result of criticism by wildlife and sporting groups. A Criminal Code section that enables parent to instruct children in use of firearms would be amended but not repealed.

- The definition of ammunition, which in the present bill includes "any component, element or part such as a bullet, pellet, cartridge case, primer or propellant powder," would be amended but the object would continue to be to prevent people from making ammunition without licence.

Progressive Conservatives and one Liberal on the Commons justice committee speculated on the controls.

Gordon Towers (PC-Red Deer) hinted at family breakdown if parents could no longer take their children out on shooting jaunts.

Bob Brisco (PC-Kootenay West) said black bears amble up and down the streets of towns in his B.C. riding. He portrayed the bears attacking domestic dogs and cats as housewives, unable to get their husbands' locked-up rifles and ammunition, watched the mauling.

Alcoholism, mental instability and criminal tendencies are among the hurdles Canadians would have to overcome to get a licence to buy guns.

Jack Horner (PC-Crowfoot) said he has been told that 60 per cent of the Crowfoot tribe in Alberta is alcoholic. The tribe also had treaty right to firearms.

"How would you think the law the white man is passing is going to affect them?" Horner asked.

Earlier Tuesday, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand had noted that many Indian women seemed keen on the gun controls.

Mercenary Ad Probed

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has asked the RCMP to find out whether a newspaper advertisement appealing for mercenary soldiers violates the Foreign Enlistment Act.

He was replying to Andrew Brewin (NDP-Greenwood) who said in the Commons that an ad in the April 10 edition of the Ottawa Citizen advertising "mercenary opportunities" in foreign countries might constitute a violation or contemplated violation of the act.

The act prohibits anyone from recruiting Canadians to enlist in armed forces outside of Canadian ones, Brewin said.

Turner Making a New Mark

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The advertising generally is unobtrusive, taking up perhaps three column inches in the business section of newspapers and usually featuring a photograph of someone unknown to the general public.

Sometimes, however, the reader's eye is drawn by a familiar face.

Lately, it has been the handsome, square-jawed face of John Turner, the 46-year-old former federal finance minister who resigned his seat in Parliament in February after giving up his portfolio last fall in the middle of a storm of rumors about a rift between him and Prime Minister Trudeau.

The latest announcement comes from MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., which approved Turner's nomination as a director at a shareholders' meeting Tuesday.

It was the fifth corporate directorship for Turner since his retirement from active politics and, from all indications, it's far from being the last.

So far all have been major companies: Canadian Pacific Ltd., Crown Life Insurance Co., Canadian Investment Fund Ltd., and Marathon Realty Ltd., a CP subsidiary.

This is a measure of how Turner is viewed in the business community.

A corporation lawyer, he has invaluable associations at the federal level and, presumably because his more than 10 years in the cabinet involved constant dealings with provincial ministers, at that level of government as well.

His four years as finance minister also have given him a legacy of contacts in the business world, valuable also to his new employer, the prestigious Toronto law firm of McMillan, Binch.

What do company directors do?

They generally pull in several thousand dollars a year just for being available, but this usually entails attending a minimum number of board meetings if they want to collect their entire pay.

The average director's fee at Crown Life is $5,693 a year, but spokesmen for the other companies have declined to say, even approximately, what Turner is receiving for his services.

Assuming a $5,000 average, his directorships so far are worth $25,000 on top of his law firm's annual salary, estimated at well upward of $50,000.

Boards are instrumental in the formation of company policy and one area where this raises question is in the banking field.

Could Turner, in good conscience, accept a bank directorship after having had access to a lot of highly confidential information on how the government sees the banking business?

One company source says such a move "would be viewed with some eyebrow raising even after he's waited a decent length of time."

HOW NEW CHEESE PREMIUM PLUS WAS BEGOTTEN.

First, there was Premium Crackers by Christie.
And for generations people loved them for their taste.
For their crunch.

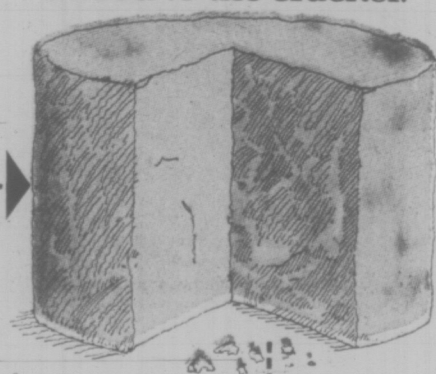

Then, as was fitting, the cracker evolved into a thinner, crunchier dimension.

It was called Premium Plus Crackers by Christie. And soon people grew to love that cracker.

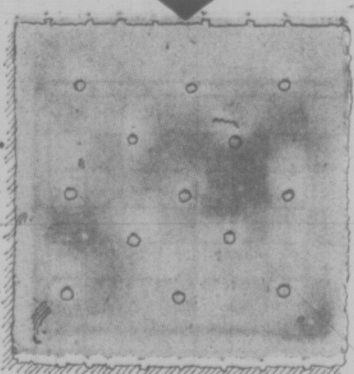

Then, because variety is the very spice of life, aged Canadian Cheddar cheese was added to the cracker.

And Christie called the new cracker, new Cheese Premium Plus Crackers.

Then to let the general public know that new Cheese Premium Plus Crackers are from the same family as regular Premium Plus Crackers, we packaged them in an identical box. Except for the colour and the word "Cheese". And this is a picture of the box.

Health Care Pledge Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Security and information appeared to be the main concerns of provincial health ministers leaving a Tuesday session of federal-provincial health cost-sharing organizations.

Quebec Social Affairs Minister Claude Forget said after the federal government's unilateral decision last year to impose ceilings on their share of medical care costs that he wanted some assurance a new program would last at least five years.

"I'm sitting quietly and watching this interesting exercise," said Bette Stephenson, Ontario's acting health minister.

"My government won't be making any commitments until it knows the exact financial plans of the government and it won't know that until the first ministers' conference next week."

Forget said there appears to be a consensus forming among the provinces that increased tax points, which would allow the provinces to keep a larger proportion of the taxes raised within their borders, would straighten out the health cost-sharing snarl.

"Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Alberta and Newfoundland all came out in support of the idea this morning," Forget said.

Manitoba Health Minister Laurent Desjardins expressed guarded optimism over the morning negotiations.

"We're working together because in the end there are no federal or provincial citizens, only Canadians," he said.

Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde said increased tax points are being considered, but "it is a difficult and technical issue, involving billions of dollars."

He said negotiations are proceeding slowly because both the federal and provincial governments are afraid of being hurt through a new cost-sharing system.

"The existing system is doing pretty well, so no one really feels pushed to make a change," Lalonde added.

Shortage of Insurance Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — A tough approach by the anti-inflation board to profits of property and casualty insurance companies could result in a shortage of general insurance in Canada, Richard Humphrys, federal superintendent of insurance, said Tuesday.

Humphrys told the Commons finance committee that the general insurance companies lost money on their investment in 1974 and 1975 and some may withdraw from the field if the board curtails their profit levels this year.

Under questioning, however, Humphrys said the amount of insurance available in the country is currently adequate, although there are problems in some areas.

He said he knows of no companies that have specifically threatened to withdraw because of the controls program, but suggested this could be the result if companies are refused board permission to recoup losses of the two previous years.

The government recently extended the controls program to include all general insurance companies — rather than just those with more than 500 employees — in order to retain pricing control over the industry. This had been recommended by the board.

Humphrys said he was consulted by the board before the recommendation was made, and the board is aware of the problem with the insurance industry, where inflation has greatly increased the amounts paid out in claims.

Although some individual companies made profits in the previous two years, the federally-incorporated companies collectively lost $268 million in 1974 and $22 million in 1975. Companies are seeking to turn this around by raising rates, he said.

Under questioning from Sinclair Stevens (PC-York-Simcoe), Mr. Humphrys said 28 general insurance companies had withdrawn from the field in Canada during 1975 and the first three months of 1976. However, he said this total included companies which had amalgamated.

Don't Bank on Board, AIB Enforcer Warns

BOOST IN ADVERTISING NO SOLUTION TO CURBS

OTTAWA (CP) — Companies can increase their advertising or research spending under anti-inflation guides but must offset this by cutting expenditures in other areas, such as charitable donations, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told the Commons Tuesday.

The restrictions are intended to prevent companies from off-setting profits from unnecessarily-high prices by increasing the ratio of their expenditures to business volume in the restricted areas.

EDMONTON (CP) — Anti-inflation administrator Donald Tansley warned unions Tuesday that his role as enforcer of the government's controls program might require him to set tougher limits on wage increases than those allowed by the Anti-Inflation Board.

Tansley said there seems to be little appreciation that a union which initiated an appeal against a board decision by having the case referred to the administrator faced "the distinct possibility" of ending up with less than the board recommended.

In his first public speech since being appointed Dec. 31, Tansley said the board had flexibility for its role of attempting to achieve voluntary compliance with the selective wage and price controls.

He was speaking to a luncheon meeting of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce and the University of Alberta legal education seminar.

The board "must on occasion be able to bend somewhat to achieve its purpose and in the final analysis it need only answer to the court of public opinion."

The administrator, by contrast, had to issue a binding order which would stand up to legal appeal to the anti-inflation appeal tribunal or the courts and "was bound to apply the law and the guidelines as they exist."

Where the board might "lean on the generous side" in persuading parties to agree, the administrator "will apply the guidelines in a manner which will fully satisfy the legal requirements of the scheme."

Those seeking a reference to the administrator should be aware that the end results are not necessarily peaches and cream.

"Unless their case is strong, the parties seeking a reference run the risk of ending up with less than the Anti-Inflation Board was willing to grant."

Cabinet Appeal Over Rollback

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Appeals to the federal cabinet were made in the Commons Tuesday by opposition MPs to have the Anti-Inflation Board reconsider its rollback of a wage settlement on the grounds that the existence of several northern communities would otherwise be in jeopardy.

Finance Minister Don Macdonald and Labor Minister John Munro said the appeals for a review of the rollback of the settlement between United Steel Workers and the International Nickel Company plant at Thompson, Manitoba, should be directed to the AIB not to the cabinet.

The ruling by the AIB in the Thompson case appeared to "ignore completely" a historical relationship between northern plants and southern plants, New Democrat Stanley Knowles claimed.

It was installing a lower pay scale in the north and with the new appeal procedures for the AIB not yet in place the cabinet should insist a change be made in the board's ruling, he added.

Macdonald said it would not be proper for cabinet to intervene and try to set its judgment above that of the board.

With regard to the proposed appeals procedure he urged the members of the House to support an early passage of the legislation so that the appeals procedure can be put into operation.

It would then be available for the Thompson case.

Cecil Smith (PC-Churchill) and John Fraser (PC-Vancouver South) also made representations to have the rollback set aside.

A telegram signed by 3,000 citizens of Northern Manitoba protesting the rollback has been sent to Prime Minister Trudeau.

Fraser urged Munro to give assurances that the northern residents will be allowed to receive the same wage scale as workers in similar industries in the south.

"Thompson will die if the ruling is allowed to stand," Fraser claimed.

NO LIMIT WORD

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen Tuesday stopped short of saying Canada will declare its own 200-mile economic limit when he echoed pessimism about a limit resulting from the United Nations Law of the Sea conference.

He was answering Nova Scotia MP Lloyd Crouse who said the government has advised the fishing industry to wait for a 200-mile fishing limit until after the conference although government officials are pessimistic about any sea agreements being reached between the scores of countries involved.

"I agree that it's not likely that by the end of this particular session a partial treaty relating to fishing or a general treaty will be reached," MacEachen said.

That will depend on whether the layout he's following calls for type from a particular family, and on how many units are in the line of type he's marking up. Clarendon and Newton are two of the typefaces Denny may call for, each of which comes in sizes from teensy-tiny (6 pt.) to great big (96 point). He must decide whether to use serif or sans-serif type. (Serifs are the cross-lines at the top and bottom of each letter.) Then, there are the condensed (tall, thin) letters, extended (wide, squat) letters, italics (slanted), and many in between. The choice of a blocky type adds "weight" to a heading or block of copy. The choice of italic script will achieve a delicate, light-hearted feeling. ## 54% Back Noose In Poll of MPs OTTAWA (CP) — Only 31 per cent of members of Parliament who voted in a recent Canadian Police Association poll favor the abolition of capital punishment, according to a tabulation released Tuesday.

Fifty-four per cent favor retention of hanging for murder. Fifteen per cent are undecided.

Mervyn Cameron of Ottawa, association president, said 257 MPs were asked where they stand on legislation now before Parliament to abolish the death penalty.

Of these 89 would retain hanging, 51 want it abolished, 25 are undecided and 92 did not reply.

Retentionist members were the largest group in all provinces except Ontario, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island.

The poll was conducted by provincial police associations in each province, Cameron said.

There are 264 seats in the Commons but two are in the northern territories, two are vacant and three MPs — two in Ontario, one in Quebec — could not be reached.

The national police association has been urging MPs and senators to vote for retention of the death penalty, now provided only for killers of police-men and prison guards on duty.

Post Office Shut After $6,000 Goes Missing

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey explained to the Commons Tuesday that the services of a post office in a northern Indian community of Island Lake had been temporarily suspended because an audit indicated a shortage of close to $6,000.

The shortage in the operations of the northern Manitoba post office might have come about through "error, possibly through inefficiency or possibly through fraud," said the minister.

Arrangements were made Tuesday to deliver the mail to that northern community from another post office six miles away in a Hudson Bay office.

"I hope that will satisfy the situation until such time as we find another postmaster in the community," said Mackasey.

He told reporters that there will be no more closings of northern post offices "without me knowing about it."

J. R. Holmes (PC — Lambton Kent) said that postal service had been discontinued to four Indian communities namely Wasagamack, Poplar River, Blood Vain and Garden Hill in northern Manitoba.

They relied on the postal services for such important matters as receiving old age pension cheques, family allowances and outside news, he said.

He urged the minister to investigate the circumstances of the shutdown.

The Garden Hill Indian band which operates the post office has been attempting to get it re-opened since it was shut April 1.

Mackasey told reporters the post office department was "not racist" and that white and Indian communities received the same treatment where a post office had to be closed.

Mackasey is to receive a written report on this situation next week.

Danson Shuffles Over Patronage

OTTAWA (FP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said he was interested in changing the present practice whereby the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. must choose solicitors from a list provided by the justice department.

"I would be most interested in finding a system that is more satisfactory and fair," he told the Commons.

Replying to questions from James McGrath (PC — St. John's East), Danson said he had just met CMHC directors and "posed this problem to them for their consideration so that their interest can be observed by all."

However, he had prefaced his remarks by saying "all lending institutions of course must provide a list of solicitors who are qualified and who they would choose."

McGrath had referred to published reports last week that CMHC "is required to operate from lists of notaries and lawyers supplied by the minister of justice."

McGrath asked if the minister were prepared to revise this procedure "in order to give Canadians who find this procedure repugnant the opportunity to choose their own solicitors when they are looking for mortgages" from CMHC.

After noting he would be interested in a change, Danson added that "as long as people are competent and fulfil their role well, that is our main consideration."

McGrath then asked if the minister would revise the procedure "further to allow patrons of CMHC to use their own solicitor."

"It is common practice that the lender must choose his lawyer," Danson replied.

"The borrower can also name a solicitor of his choice but the taxpayer's interest must be served and I think that is the case."

U.S. SEIZES B.C. YACHT

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—A 107-foot Canadian pleasure yacht, the Huntress, is being held here by United States customs officials, who say operators of the yacht owe $31,000 in fines.

The craft is owned by Ron Ott of Vancouver under a mortgage with the Steveston branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

The yacht is a submarine chaser built in 1943 and used by the Canadian Navy during the Second World War. It was rebuilt in 1957 into a yacht and is valued by the Royal Bank at $250,000.

Bob Snyder of the U.S. customs office in Los Angeles said Tuesday the yacht had been cruising among west coast ports, mostly in California, since Jan. 22 without obeying U.S. laws applying to foreign vessels.

He said the $31,000 in civil penalties was assigned for 14 violations.

The yacht developed engine trouble off the Oregon coast and was impounded by customs agents in Clio Bay on April 14. It was towed to Portland on Monday by the coast guard cutter Yaquina for further customs service action.

A lawyer representing the Royal Bank said the bank "would be taking possession as mortgagee; the bank has a substantial interest in the vessel."

Bank manager Andrew Gillespie declined to specify the extent of the bank's interest.

Snyder said the customs service would require a large deposit before it would release the vessel.

Landslide For Carter

Jimmy Carter almost wiped out his active opponents for the Democratic presidential nomination in Tuesday's Pennsylvania presidential primary, and now he is ready to confront Senator Hubert Humphrey if it comes to that.

It may not, if Carter can keep rolling at the rate he managed Tuesday. He won the popular vote with 36 per cent and a landslide margin over Senator Henry Jackson of Washington.

And he held a surprising lead today as the ballots were counted in the separate election of national convention delegates. He won or was leading for 65 of the state's 178 delegates.

President Ford won the Republican primary without opposition, since Ronald Reagan skipped Pennsylvania and is making his next stand in Texas on Saturday.

25-Cent Gas Hike

OTTAWA (CP)—A government policy on energy calls for all-out development of northern petroleum resources and price increases during the next two years that will add as much as 25 cents to a gallon of gasoline and heating oil.

The policy statement, presented in the Commons Tuesday by Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie in advance of a federal-provincial meeting next week on oil prices, also says the country will continue to rely on oil imports.

While saying the country should consider the social and economic costs of developing northern petroleum resources—an apparent bow in the direction of native and environmental doubters—the 170-page policy statement prepared by the federal energy department nevertheless calls for doubling the development efforts in the North to bring Arctic oil and gas to market.

To encourage oil companies to carry out such development, the policy proposes increasing the price of oil and gas during the next two years by up to 60 per cent, towards the world price of about $13 from the present $8 a barrel for crude oil.

The aim is to hold the line on oil imports, the statement says.

But it also abandons the two-year-old federal policy goal of self-sufficiency in energy resources, switching instead to a target described as self-reliance.

That is defined as holding oil imports at present rates so that by 1985 they will constitute no more than one-third of total national oil needs compared with just more than a half at present.

To develop the necessary energy resources needed to meet needs in 1980, even with increased conservation measures, will require investment of $150 billion in 15 years, says the policy statement—a spending rate of $229,000 a minute.

T. C. Douglas, the New Democrat energy critic, criticized the government for abandoning the principle of self-sufficiency, saying "if this is self-reliance I'd look with horror on any policy of dependency."

But government officials who briefed reporters on the policy said "the goal of self-sufficiency is not within our grasp."

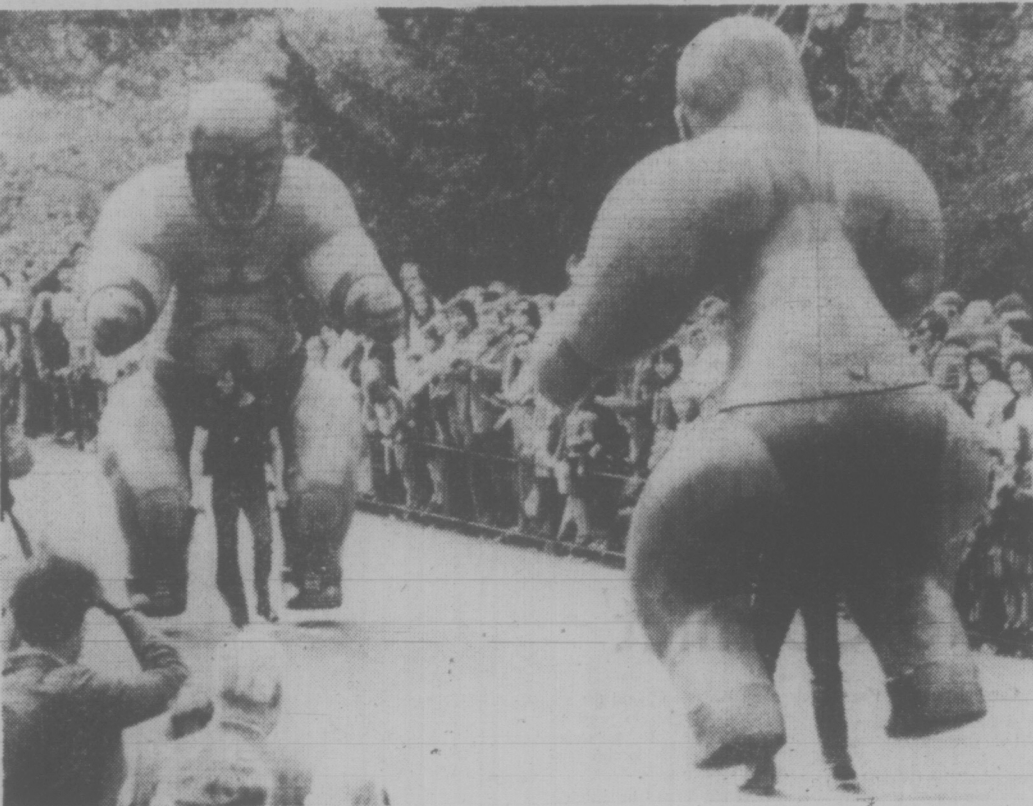

Even the policy of self-reliance, holding imports as low as possible, would be expensive with higher prices necessary to bring on northern supplies and encourage construction of synthetic oil sands plants.

Aside from increasing price and reducing dependence on oil imports, the government sets a specific target of doubling exploration spending in the North during the next three years to $700 million annually from $350 million.

It also hopes to reduce the rate of energy growth during the next 10 years to less than 3.5 per cent from the current 5.5 per cent.

Another Mirabel Deal Questioned by McKay

By DAN FOTTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Conservative MP Elmer MacKay Tuesday raised questions in the Commons about possible irregularities in the awarding of a $200,000 sound system contract for Montreal's Mirabel airport.

Continuing his prodding for a judicial inquiry, MacKay asked Transport Minister Otto Lang if he could "assure the House that to his knowledge there were no irregularities or irregularities" concerning the public address system contract.

He asked Lang to inquire as to "how it is that the single and only bidder whose tender was found in the tender box when it was opened was not the bidder who won the contract."

The minister criticized MacKay for his tactic of raising such questions "without giving advance notice but added that "generally... I know of no irregularities with regard to the tendering system."

Meanwhile, Lang dismissed as a "puff of nothing" allegations of irregularities raised by Mr. MacKay Monday about the bar-restaurant concession awarded for Mirabel in 1973-74.

He said he found "no irregularities" in the contract awarded to Les Entreprises Cara Lee for the food and drink concession.

A spokesman for Les Entreprises Cara Quebec Lee, said, however, that allegations of attempted interference in the awarding of the bar-restaurant concession at Mirabel Airport are accurate.

MacKay said Monday that Boyd Matchett of Toronto, president of Cara Operations Ltd., had to call Gerry Stoner, then deputy minister of transport, in late 1973 to get the tenders for the concession opened publicly.

"Basically, we concur with the statement issued by MacKay," said Brian Robertson, a public relations officer for Les Entreprises Cara.

"We've really got nothing to add because what MacKay said was correct," he said.

On the subject of the sound system, MacKay said the one bid found in the tender box was that of a Montreal firm whom he would not name until he contacted it.

He said that company was apparently congratulated for getting the contract only to receive a telephone call 24 hours later saying another bid had been found.

The MP for Central Nova said he believed the second bid was by RCA Victor, who ended up with the contract.

FOREST $ DOWN

Provincial forestry revenues declined to $37.98 million in 1975 from $197.2 million in 1974, says the annual report of the British Columbia Forestry Service.

The service's annual report, tabled in the legislature today, says the annual timber harvest was down 16.6 per cent in 1975 compared with the year before.

"Prospects for 1976 appear a little brighter," says the report.

"By year's end (1975), economists generally were optimistically saying we were 'at the bottom' with encouraging prospects for gradual revival seen for mid-to-late 1976."

AIB Approves Petroleum Hikes

OTTAWA (CP)—The Anti-Inflation Board announced Tuesday it has approved price increases for petroleum products marketed by three major oil companies.

The latest board approvals likely will touch off a general round of consumer price increases for products like gasoline and home heating oil.

Gulf Oil Canada and Texaco Ltd., both U.S. subsidiaries, and British-controlled BP Canada Ltd. each were given permission to raise their product prices by an average 1.1 cents a gallon.

Gulf's increases were effective last Saturday. Texaco's will take effect May 12 and BP's May 13.

The Anti-Inflation Board earlier had accepted a proposal from Imperial Oil Ltd., a U.S. subsidiary and the largest oil company operating in Canada, to raise its Esso product prices by one cent a gallon.

The latest board-approved increases will not be evenly distributed among products. In Gulf's case, it will add 1.35 cents to gasoline, diesel and light fuel oil prices and .037 cents to the price of a gallon of other products.

Texaco's increase in prices will be 1.02 cents a gallon across all products, plus a factor for higher rail transportation costs that averages about one-tenth of one cent a gallon.

BP will raise heavy fuel oil prices 0.54 cents a gallon and other petroleum products 1.25 cents a gallon.

Hospital Union Talking but Poised for a Strike

Negotiators for the hospital industry and the 16,000-member Hospital Employees Union met in Vancouver today with a provincial mediator, but the union says it is still poised for strike action across the province.

The union and the industry were to have separate meetings with the mediator.

The strike threat came Tuesday after the Hospital Labor Relations Association (HLRA), which represents 103 B.C. hospitals, rejected the contract settlement terms recommended by industrial inquiry commissioner Bert Blair.

The union had recommended the contract and was in the process of conducting ratification votes when the rejection notice came from the employers.

Hospital union head Jack Gerow has marked Vancouver General, the province's largest hospital as the prime target for strike action, which would be the first in the union's 31-year history.

The 2,500 HEU members at Vancouver General are voting on strike action Thursday night and Friday morning, Gerow said.

The votes should be counted by Friday afternoon and the union would be in a legal strike position by Monday.

The union has already taken strike votes at three other Lower Mainland hospitals—St. Paul's, Royal Columbian and Shaughnessy.

Gerow vowed that employees at several Lower Mainland hospitals would be off the job "as soon as humanly possible."

Larry Tuitt, director of services at Vancouver General, said, however, it is "business as usual" until the hospital receives official strike notice.

As soon as the strike notice is received, the hospital's contingency plan will be put into effect, Tuitt said.

The plan includes curtailing of admissions.

The most critical patients would be held and consolidated in one area of the hospital while others would be discharged, referred to home care programs or other resources, he said.

Strike action, if any, at Victoria's two major hospitals, Royal Jubilee and Victoria General, would come after the Lower Mainland walkouts.

An HEU official in Victoria said today the membership of the two hospitals is still voting on whether to accept the contract recommendations.

He said today would be the last day for voting and that no plans have yet been made to call a strike vote meeting.

The move to get the two sides together with a mediation officer came from Labor Minister Allan Williams.

Williams said he asked mediator Ed Sims to meet with the industry and the union to determine how far apart they are on the dispute issues.

Gerow said the union is willing to meet with Sims but that it is not prepared to negotiate down from the Blair recommendations.

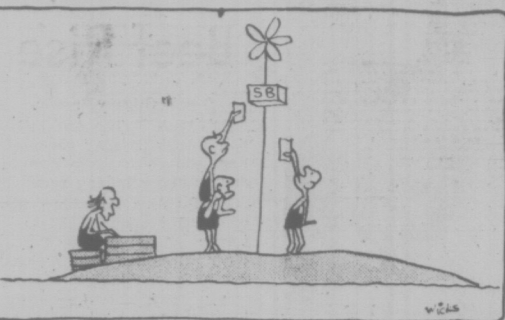

Williams said he is willing to meet personally at any time with the two parties if it will help avert a strike. Provincial legislation allows the labor minister to impose a 21-day cooling off period in a hospital dispute, but Williams said he would not decide on any course of action until he has received a report from Sims later today.

Gerow said the HEU will allow members of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C., the Health Sciences Association and the International Union of Operating Engineers to cross picket lines at Vancouver General in the event of a strike.

Those three unions are also without contracts with the hospital industry.

Jack Campbell, executive director of the 6,000-member Health Sciences Association, which represents technicians and paramedical hospital employees, said his union's sympathies "certainly lie with the HEU."

His union would be meeting soon with the HEU to figure out a strike plan "that we both can live with," he added.

The Blair recommendations would have amounted to an increase in wages and fringe benefits of 15 per cent, according to the industry, or 13 per cent, according to the union.

The HLRA said it would stick with its policy of limiting all increases, both in wages and fringe benefits, to eight per cent during the one year agreement.

They are opposed unanimously to the guerrilla war, which the nationalists have stepped up following the breakdown of the constitutional talks.

Smith announced his new plan hours after U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger in a speech in Lusaka, Zambia, castigate the Rhodesia government for its "transgression."

Kissinger pledged full support for Britain's demand that Rhodesia, which broke away from British rule in 1965, agree to a black-majority Government within two years.

In his Lusaka speech, Kissinger also said there is still time for South Africa to achieve reconciliation of its people for the benefit of all.

But, he warned, the time limit now is shorter than generally perceived a few years ago.

Apartheid remains an issue of great concern to those committed to racial justice and human dignity, he added.

"No one, including the leaders of black Africa, challenges the right of white South Africa to live in their country," Kissinger said.

years of full page ads against the NDP government," said Lauk.

"First of all he (Waterland) says it's improper to charge mines taxes, then he says it's improper to criticize and now he's doing their advertising for them," he said.

Gibson said there was clearly a conflict because the support group would obviously feel pressured to hire Fothergill to do an ad campaign after Waterland had chosen him to do the outline.

The industry depends on the goodwill of the minister, said Gibson, so obviously there would be a feeling they should hire the man suggested by the minister.

Waterland said Fothergill did the job for him "and that's it." The mining group is under no obligation to hire him, he said.

During the meeting with the support group April 14, when Fothergill's outline was presented, Waterland said the resource industries do need to band together to publicize their contribution to the provincial economy.

"I would urge the mining and forestry support industry to pool your resources into a really good, proud and informative campaign."

"Let's organize a committee to create and execute that effort," he said.

"Mining and forestry are not going to devastate the province or deplete the resources. Not for a thousand years can we possibly run out of ore, and then technology will create new resources," he said.

Lauk called the minister's attitudes "pre-Cambrian" and he hopes the incident and the remarks were just the result of inexperience.

MFA Borrows $52 Million

The Municipal Finance Authority has borrowed $52.2 million on the New York money market at 8 1/2 per cent. Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board, said today.

The funds will be used by member municipalities throughout the province to finance a variety of projects. A total of $3.3 million will go to the regional district, Saanich, Central Saanich and North Saanich, most of it to finance sewers.

Campbell, one of the authority's directors, said current rates on the Canadian money market are 10.5 to 10 1/2 per cent. The loan in the U.S. is at "the best (least costly) interest rate seen for quite a little while."

The MFA has received considerable criticism for foreign borrowing it undertook in 1972. Unfavorable exchange rates between Canadian dollars and Swiss francs, and German marks since then have increased repayment costs considerably.

$12,000 Park Rent For Youth Baseball?

The Senior Babe Ruth Baseball League won't use city-owned Royal Athletic Park this year if the rent goes up to $12,000 compared to last year's $1,000, says Cliff Newburg, vice-president.

"Moms and Dads, now paying 50 cents to get in to see a game, would have to increase the charge to about $20 each if we are going to pay that kind of rent (for the park)," Newburg said.

Newburg predicted the park would be left vacant a great deal this year because of rent increases.

JET CRASH KILLS 37

Times News Services

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands — An American Airlines jet carrying 88 persons overshot the runway on landing Tuesday, careened into a gas station across a highway and broke up in a fury of flames. The airline today reported 37 persons dead or missing.

He said city council should not charge any rental for amateurs.

"They should let us have the park for nothing and they can have the proceeds from the gate admission," he said.

The league has six teams with 14 boys between the ages of 15 and 18 on each, and volunteer managers and coaches for each team.

Newburg said the league would likely have to play its games at Windsor Park.

New rates will be $50 or 55 per cent of the gross gate receipts up to $100 and 35 per cent of the gross receipts after that, plus 5 per cent for ticket handling. In addition, there's a $30-an-hour charge for the use of floodlights, compared to the former $5 charge.

Chairman of the city's recreation committee, Ald. Ron McKenzie said he is opposed to subsidizing groups "which don't help themselves" and added that under no circumstances should any recreation facility run at a loss.

"I hope by the end of June, council will sit down and look at the whole picture. Council will just have to bite the bullet on this one," he said when the issue came up at a committee meeting earlier this week.

If council feels that recreation facilities should be subsidized, he said, it should give grants to the various groups using the facilities, but before making any grants to any group, "I would want to see a financial statement to find out whether or not they are relying 100 per cent on the city."

Ald. Bill Tindall, council's finance committee chairman, opposed McKenzie's suggestion.

"Are they community facilities or profit-making enterprises?" he asked.

Everyone Giving It a Bash!

max low

Try it! That's the advice you get the moment you walk into the Oak Bay Recreation Centre. It's all around you, printed on signs and posters, and dashing here, there and everywhere are recreation assistants wearing white T-shirts with Try It and Essaie-Le emblazoned on the back.

It is, of course, the federal government's Sports Caravan, which has travelled more than 50,000 miles and presented about 80 exhibitions across the country since taking to the road in 1972. And it's on its first visit to Victoria.

Despite the hordes of school children, all either busy trying it or lining up for a bash, as well as scores of teachers and parents and others who just popped in when the show opened Tuesday afternoon, it wasn't too difficult to find George Fertiga, described by one of his assistants as "the Carnival Boss."

George, a slightly more portly version of Yul Brynner, is officially the Sports Demonstration Program Manager and he travels with three assistants and a heap of equipment in a giant van.

"We pick up somewhere between 25 and 35 people locally, depending on the size of the place," explains George. "We pay them to set it up, babysit it, and take it down."

"The whole concept is to get local clubs involved," he says. "We try to get badminton clubs, golf clubs and tennis clubs; for example, to have people come down and pitch in and demonstrate their game and try to get people interested in it."

George looks around at the crowds of youngsters at the various sports booths in the centre's curling hall and spilling out on to the Oak Bay Junior High School playing field next door and he grins.

"There are a lot of kids here — we're scheduling 200 an hour and they're being bused in from all the schools around," he says. "The teachers bring their PE classes and for them it's a field day."

And what about the adults? In the afternoon, says George, their excuse is "oh well, we'll let the kids do it."

"But we figure they'll come and give it a try in the evenings when the kids aren't around."

Well, they were around all right Tuesday afternoon — and "try it" they certainly did!

There were lineups at just about everything, particularly the archery and rifle shooting stalls and the ping pong and tennis displays where you get a chance to hit back at a machine firing the balls out.

Films of skiing and an imitation ski slope where you can try out your skills on a pair of short skis were popular, there was a good crowd waiting to don skates and try out the artificial silicone ice surface, and eight youngsters battled away in a sort of double-doubles on one badminton court. Outside on the grass there are soccer, baseball, hockey and golf stalls, among others, as well as the Canada Fitness Award Program for youngsters aged seven to 17 going on.

Some of the athletic styles leave a little to be desired. A boy attacks the balls being hurled out of the tennis machine with a swing that would make Hank Aaron envious. And a gorgeous-looking girl stops in mid-air, while trying to shoot the puck, tries to decide whether to smash my camera with the hockey stick and then drops it and runs off with her hands over her face.

A lot of the sports — there are said to be 66 displayed — are new to many people. But Canadians are trying them and this is the whole idea: to try each sport with the hope of finding one or more that you can do and like and that hopefully you will use to keep fit.

Sports Caravan may not take you very deeply into any one sport. It merely gives you a lick of the icing on the cake. But for many it can be the start down the road to physical improvement. And, even if it isn't the start to anything, then it's fun.

Two little boys, struggling to pull themselves up to eye level on a bar, agree. "Yeah, it's pretty good, alright," confirms Gary Johal.

"The whole place is fun," adds his wide-eyed friend Gerald Thomas. When it leaves Victoria, Sports Caravan goes to Nanaimo, Courtenay and then to the Interior. But until then, it will be going in Oak Bay from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. each day until Saturday night. Try it!

City Police Jail Cells Don't Bar Inflation

Members of the Victoria police board agreed today that the city of Victoria should not have to subsidize accommodation costs for prisoners from other jurisdictions who occupy the city police cells.

The board instructed city comptroller Mason Sheldrick to inform the provincial government, neighboring municipalities and other agencies that the city will be increasing its prisoner day rate from $5 to $10.

Police Chief Jack Gregory pointed out that at present meals alone cost $6.15 a day for each prisoner.

Last year, he said, his department supplied 2,746 meals to the city's own prisoners, and 4,083 to those who were the responsibility of other jurisdictions.

The catering breakdown for chargeable meals was the provincial government, 372; Saanich, 184; Central Saanich, 17; Oak Bay, 33; Esquimalt, 138; RCMP, 540; and "other" (including such agencies as the Immigration department), 59.

Actual cost to Victoria for providing all meals in the cells last year was $17,654, and the 1976 budgeted figure is $19,400.

The board also decided that the city should bill for the cost of employing a jail matron on a part-time, call-in basis, when cells are occupied by female prisoners from outside the city.

'FRIED' FOR SCHOOL TAXES

'Embarrassing' 27.5%

Greater Victoria school board approved a 27½ per cent increase in education taxes for district residents Tuesday with the proviso that a $2.3 million cutback in spending be discussed next year.

"It's an embarrassment to us all," said Trustee Janet Baird, "but I think we've genuinely tried to keep the increase down and we've been tried for it."

Trustee Peter Bunn, decrying the fact that school board spending across the province is out of control, said it is to late to raise the district's budget because "we're three months into the budget already."

"There's no way we can chop any meaningful way without doing great damage," he urged the board to make a solid decision on how much the taxpayers can stand next year and suggested the board operate on the premise that, for example, the budget would only increase 8 per cent next year... "regardless."

But trustees opted instead to approve in principle a motion that the board accept that the number of students per teacher be increased by 1 (a saving of 97½ teachers) or the equivalent saving of $2.3 million, by September, 1977.

Ross admitted after the meeting that the class size would likely be increased, "if the board in 1977 follows through with the intent of the motion."

Trustee Susan Brice consistently spoke against the motion, saying she thinks the board will find that the $2.3 million figure "might be small potatoes" in 1977.

"I agree," said Dr. Fisher, "but at least it opens a crack in the door" to spending cutbacks.

All trustees complained they were frustrated with the education financing system controlled by the provincial government.

Under the old rules, the budget increase would have been only 13.5 per cent for the taxpayers to fund, but then the Social Credit government changed the formula.

And, Ross said, that loaded an extra burden of 6 mills (3.2 million) directly on the taxpayer.

After lengthy discussion the board approved the bylaw which will allow them to set the mill rate and levy taxes.

The budget, including capital expenses, Camosun College and the operating expenses, works out to a total of $50,639,805, and $28,970,998 will be raised by local taxation.

Amounts needed from the four core municipalities, with

BAIRD ... we tried

passage of the board's 52.75 mill rate, are:

—$14,129,475 from Victoria; —$9,194,612 from Saanich; —$3,146,966 from Oak Bay; —$1,897,154 from Esquimalt; —$601,891 from rural areas.

Earlier Tuesday Victoria city council had given preliminary approval to its 1976 budget, which will entail a 5.08-mill increase in the city's mill rate.

But the city acts as tax collector for the school district, and the school mill rate increase of 11.39 mills added to the city's, plus higher levies for regional district, hospital and assessment purposes, produces an over-all mill rate increase this year of 16.17 mills.

In dollar terms this translates to an average increase of about 17.5 per cent for the city taxpayer.

City comptroller Mason Sheldrick gave these examples of typical tax bill hikes on varying levels of assessment:

Assessment $4,000: taxes paid in 1975, $360; payable this year, $425 (an increase of 65%).

Assessment $7,000: taxes paid in 1975, $629; payable this year, $743 (11%).

Assessment $10,000: taxes paid in 1975, $900; payable this year, $1,062 ($182).

Burnaby Woman Charged

Coquitlam RCMP said today a Burnaby woman has been charged with criminal negligence in connection with the death of former Victoria high school star athlete Rick Jones earlier this month.

A police spokesman said Jennie Grams, 29, faces one charge of criminal negligence causing death, another of negligence causing bodily harm, both resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle in a two-car collision in Coquitlam March 26.

Jones died April 2 from injuries he received in the mishap. A passenger in his car, Denise Holst, 18, was seriously injured and is permanently paralysed from the neck down.

Mrs. Grams escaped with minor injuries. Miss Holst was a Pan American Games gymnast and had been expected to be on the Canadian Olympic team.

Ten-Mile Point Woman To Fight for Bike Path

A Ten Mile Point resident told Saanich's public works committee Tuesday she's starting a one-woman campaign to get Tudor Hill residents to help make Tudor Hill Road safer for pedestrians and cyclists.

Mrs. Anna Foster of 3040 Baynes Road told the committee she had petitioned for a bicycle path two years ago, gathering 70 signatures.

"Tudor Road carries the traffic of all the hinterland. It's an extremely dangerous road with hardly any visibility. The answer will be to have a bicycle path," she said.

Her husband, J. Bristol

Foster, added, "It's particularly dangerous in the winter when children are returning from school. I've got so close to hitting children it's had me scared... It probably won't become a priority until a child gets killed."

Ald. Fred Severson took exception to Foster's last remark, saying it was attention-getting but unfair.

"This problem is an over-all one in Saanich," Severson said, "Would the residents agree to a Local Initiatives Program (to provide a sidewalk)?"

Mrs. Foster said she would campaign for a dirt path to be financed under an LIP agreement, with residents paying a share of the costs.

Chairman Ald. Sandy Noel pointed out that some Ten Mile Point residents had extended their properties, landscaping them out to the edge of the road. These people, he said, might not be in favor of giving up their landscaping for a path.

"Leave those people to me. I will fight with them. They are not many," replied Mrs. Foster.

"The good majority of people along there want a sidewalk," Noel conceded.

The area will be studied by council when it takes a fact-finding tour on public works requirements on Friday, May 14.

Crusader Maggi Lynn with Susie

By PAT DUFOR Times Staff

Susie is one of the lucky ones.

She is one of 27 stray dogs that found shelter with Mrs. Maggi Lynn, president of the Greater Victoria Animals' Crusaders, during the past year.

Susie is still with Mrs. Lynn. The others have been adopted.

Be Kind to Animals Week begins on Sunday and today Susie went to City Hall with her mistress to hear Mayor Mike Young make the official proclamation.

Also on hand were Don Adams, manager of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and Val Gislason of the Association for Prevention of Cruelty to Fur-Bearing Animals, an organization committed to the banning of leg-hold traps.

Mrs. Lynn's group is dedicated to educating the public to the need for spaying and neutering clinics and she has just returned from Los Angeles where three are in operation.

She said that since the clinics were started 21 per cent fewer abandoned animals have been picked up and 23 per cent fewer have had to be killed.

Susie looks at her mistress with trust as Mrs. Lynn contrasts the situation in Canada where "250,000 animals have had to be destroyed in one year... and that's not counting those that have been abandoned or found dead on city streets."

Mrs. Lynn says statistics prove that only 25 per cent of animals taken to animal shelters find new homes. The rest must die.

The fate of animals dumped alongside the road or left behind when their owners move is worse.

Many starve to death slowly. Thousands are killed by cars or left to die a slow painful death. Some are so badly injured they die from gangrene or loss of blood.

Mrs. Lynn's group has been trying to persuade local politicians of the need for clinics to cut down the overpopulation that leads to such tragedies.

Susie's trip to City Hall could be the turning point the group's been waiting to reach.

Youthful 'Santa' in EMI

An 18-year-old youth who had so little faith in the monetary system he gave dollars to all takers in downtown Victoria is in Eric Martin Institute today undergoing "assessment."

The youth was arrested Monday after two Saanich detectives spotted him in the to passersby.

700-block Fort giving $1 bills. Police said the youth, a recent arrival from Eastern Canada, cashed $300 in travellers cheques into $1 bills earlier in the day. He then gave the bills away, plucking them out of a plastic box, one to a customer, saying God had commanded him to do so and that his actions would generate "good Karma."

By the time police arrived he had gone through $245 of his bundle. As the officers approached he threw the box into the air and the remaining $35 scattered to the street.

Bystanders helped the officers retrieve the money.

The youth submitted without struggle and as he was being taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital told officers he felt the dollar system was on the point of collapse, that he wanted no part of it and that henceforth he would "live off the fruits of the land."

U.S. SEIZES B.C. YACHT

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—A 107-foot Canadian pleasure yacht, the Huntress, is being held here by United States customs officials, who say operators of the yacht owe $31,000 in fines.

The craft is owned by Ron Ott of Vancouver under a mortgage with the Steveston branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

The yacht is a submarine chaser built in 1943 and used by the Canadian Navy during the Second World War. It was rebuilt in 1957 into a yacht and is valued by the Royal Bank at $250,000.

Bob Snyder of the U.S. customs office in Los Angeles said Tuesday the yacht had been cruising among west coast ports, mostly in California, since Jan. 22 without obeying U.S. laws applying to foreign vessels.

He said the $31,000 in civil penalties was assigned for 14 violations.

The yacht developed engine trouble off the Oregon coast and was impounded by customs agents in Coos Bay on April 14. It was towed to Portland on Monday by the coast guard cutter Yaquina for further customs service action.

A lawyer representing the Royal Bank said the bank "would be taking possession as mortgagee; the bank has a substantial interest in the vessel."

Bank manager Andrew Gillespie declined to specify the extent of the bank's interest.

Snyder said the customs service would require a large deposit before it would release the vessel.

ICBC RIVALS NEXT SPRING?

The Social Credit government plans to invite private car insurance companies back in business next spring.

Insurance Corporation President Pat McGeer will talk to insurance executives next week to find out under what conditions they would return "not that that would influence what we'll do," said McGeer. See Page 2 for details of the ICBC annual report.

Landslide For Carter

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Jimmy Carter almost wiped out his active opponents for the Democratic presidential nomination in Tuesday's Pennsylvania presidential primary, and now he is ready to confront Senator Hubert Humphrey if it comes to that.

It may not, if Carter can keep rolling at the rate he managed Tuesday. He won the popular vote with 36 per cent and a landslide margin over Senator Henry Jackson of Washington.

And he held a surprising lead today as the ballots were counted in the senate election of national convention delegates. He won or was leading for 65 of the state's 178 delegates.

President Ford won the Republican primary without opposition, since Ronald Reagan skipped Pennsylvania and is making his next stand in Texas on Saturday.

25-Cent Gas Hike

OTTAWA (CP)—A government policy on energy calls for all-out development of northern petroleum resources and price increases during the next two years that will add as much as 25 cents to a gallon of gasoline and heating oil.

The policy statement, presented in the Commons Tuesday by Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie in advance of a federal-provincial meeting next week on oil prices, also says the country will continue to rely on oil imports.

While saying the country should consider the social and economic costs of developing northern petroleum resources—an apparent bow in the direction of native and environmental doubters—the 170-page policy statement prepared by the federal energy department nevertheless calls for double the development efforts in the North to bring Arctic oil and gas to market.

To encourage oil companies to carry out such development, the policy proposes increasing the price of oil and gas during the next two years by up to 60 per cent—towards the world price of about $13 from the present $8 a barrel for crude oil.

The aim is to hold the line on oil imports, the statement says.

But it also abandons the two-year-old federal policy goal of self-sufficiency in energy resources, switching instead to a target described as self-reliance.

That is defined as holding oil imports at present rates so that by 1985 they will constitute no more than one-third of total national oil needs compared with just more than a half at present.

To develop the necessary energy resources, needed to meet needs in 1980, even with promised conservation measures, will require investment of $180 billion in 15 years, says the policy statement—a spending rate of $229,000 a minute.

T. C. Douglas, the New Democrat energy critic, criticized the government for abandoning the principle of self-sufficiency, saying "if this is self-reliance I'd look with horror on any policy of dependency."

But government officials who briefed reporters on the policy said "the goal of self-sufficiency is not within our grasp."

Even the policy of self-reliance, holding imports as low as possible, would be expensive with higher prices necessary to bring on northern supplies and encourage construction of synthetic oil sands plants.

Aside from increasing price and reducing dependence on oil imports, the government sets a specific target of doubling exploration spending in the North during the next three years to $700 million annually from $350 million.

It also hopes to reduce the rate of energy growth during the next 10 years to less than 3.5 per cent from the current 5.5 per cent.

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—The Roman Catholic Church has acquired its own Cardinal Sin. Archbishop Jaime L. Sin of Manila was among 19 new cardinals named by Pope Paul Tuesday.

CONSUMER BRIGHT SPOT DIMS

Food, Energy Going Up

GRAPPLING with inflatable giant wrestlers, their handlers move them toward each other in mock battle to the delight of crowd lining a parade route in London.

Coffee, Beef Rise

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Anti-Inflation Board Tuesday revealed that food prices have turned, and started climbing rapidly.

Food prices had been the one bright spot in the consumer price index. While other prices had been increasing at a double-digit inflation rate of more than 10 per cent, food prices were increasing at a much slower pace.

Now, the AIB says, food prices may increase by as much as three to four per cent in the next couple of months.

Food prices continued to fall during the first three weeks of the latest month reviewed by the AIB. But in the final week of April, they turned up sharply.

There were price declines for fresh fruit, beverages and poultry, but these were offset by increases for beef, other meats, fresh vegetables and processed fruit.

The AIB index of food prices now shows an 8.3 increase over one year ago.

Further immediate price increases are anticipated for beef, other meats, dairy products, beverages, bakery goods and, possibly, fresh vegetables.

The current high retail prices for beef reflect recent farm price increases for cattle due to smaller North American marketings.

Further 10 to 15 per cent increase in retail beef prices is expected during the next two months.

Live cattle prices have already increased $8 a hundredweight from the early April level and Agriculture Canada expects a further $3 to $5 price rise by summer.

The federal government's recently announced dairy policy will increase butter, cheese and skim milk powder as well as other processed dairy products by an average of five per cent.

Retail coffee prices are expected to rise about 20 per cent as a result of continued increases in the international price for coffee beans. In recent months, retail prices have lagged behind international coffee prices.

Prices of bakery goods have increased two to three per cent in some western Canadian centres from March prices, reflecting increased labor and other costs.

Seasonal increases in fresh vegetable prices of about five per cent are likely in the next two months.

Prices of pork and eggs are likely to remain unchanged over the next two months while broiler prices might decline as a result of lower U.S. prices and increased production.

Another Mirabel Deal Queried by MacKay

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Conservative MP Elmer MacKay Tuesday raised questions in the Commons about possible irregularities in the awarding of a $300,000 sound system contract for Montreal's Mirabel airport.

Continuing his prodding for a judicial inquiry, MacKay asked Transport Minister Otto Lang if he could "assure the House that to his knowledge there were no irregularities or irregularities" concerning the public address system contract.

He asked Lang to inquire as to "how it is that the single and only bidder whose tender was found in the tender box when it was opened was not the bidder who won the contract."

The minister criticized MacKay for his tactic of raising such questions without giving advance notice but added that "generally... I know of no irregularities with regard to the tendering system."

Meanwhile, Lang dismissed as a "puff of nothing" allegations of irregularities raised by MacKay Monday about the bar restaurant concession awarded for Mirabel in 1973-74.

He said he found "no irregularities" in the contract awarded to Les Entreprises Cara Lee for the food and drink concession.

A spokesman for Les Entreprises Cara Lee said, however, that allegations of attempted interference in the awarding of the bar-restaurant concession at Mirabel Airport are accurate.

MacKay said Monday that Boyd Matchett of Toronto, president of Cara Operations Ltd. had to call Gerry Stoner, then deputy minister of transport, in late 1973 to get the tenders for the concession opened publicly.

"Basically, we concur with the statement issued by MacKay," said Brian Robertson, a public relations officer for Les Entreprises Cara.

"We've really got nothing to add because what MacKay said was correct," he said.

On the subject of the sound system, MacKay said the one bid found in the tender box was that of a Montreal firm whom he would not name until he contacted it.

He said that company was apparently congratulated for getting the contract before receiving a telephone call 24 hours later saying another bid had been found.

The MP for Central Nova said he believed the second bid was by RCA Victor, who ended up with the contract.

FOREST $ DOWN

Provincial forestry revenues declined to $57.98 million in 1975 from $197.2 million in 1974, says the annual report of the British Columbia Forestry Service.

The service's annual report, tabled in the legislature today, says the annual timber harvest was down 16.6 per cent in 1975 compared with the year before.

"Prospects for 1976 appear a little brighter," says the report.

AIB Approves Petroleum Hikes

OTTAWA (CP)—The Anti-Inflation Board announced Tuesday it has approved price increases for petroleum products marketed by three more large oil companies.

The latest board approvals likely will touch off a general round of consumer price increases for products like gasoline and home heating oil.

Gulf Oil Canada and Texaco Ltd., both U.S. subsidiaries, and British-controlled BP Canada Ltd. each were given permission to raise their product prices by an average 1.1 cents a gallon.

Gulf's increases were effective last Saturday. Texaco's will take effect May 12 and BP's May 13.

The Anti-Inflation Board earlier had accepted a proposal from Imperial Oil Ltd., a U.S. subsidiary and the largest oil company operating in Canada, to raise its Esso product prices by one cent a gallon.

The latest board-approved increases will not be evenly distributed among products. In Gulf's case, it will add 1.39 cents to gasoline, diesel and light fuel oil prices and .037 cents to the price of a gallon of other products.

TWO JAILED OVER TRIDENT PROTEST

BANGOR, Wash. (CP)—Two men were arrested Tuesday at the construction site of the Trident nuclear submarine base here.

James Douglas, of New Westminster, and John William, 26, of Seattle, both members of the anti-nuclear Pacific Life Community, were charged with criminal trespass.

The two handed out leaflets Tuesday to persons entering the site, and later used shovels to dig a small hole at the site of the main gate to the base for a coffin-shaped replica of the Trident nuclear submarine.

When they refused orders by United States Navy security officers to stop digging, the sheriff's department was called and the two were arrested.

Bail was set at $100 each. Paul Van Goozen, a Vancouver member of the anti-nuclear group, said Douglas told him during a telephone conversation that both men had refused to post the bail and were remaining in custody.

Hospital Union Talking but Poised for a Strike

Negotiators for the hospital industry and the 16,000-member Hospital Employees Union met in Vancouver today with a provincial mediator, but the union says it is still poised for strike action across the province.

The union and the industry were to have separate meetings with the mediator.

The strike threat came Tuesday after the Hospital Labor Relations Association (HLRA) which represents 163 B.C. hospitals, rejected the contract settlement terms recommended by industrial inquiry commissioner Bert Blair.

The union had recommended that its members accept the contract and was in the process of conducting ratification votes when the rejection notice came from the employers.

Hospital union head Jack Gerow has marked Vancouver General, the province's largest hospital, as the prime target for strike action, which would be the first in the union's 31-year history.

The 2,500 HEU members at Vancouver General are voting on strike action Thursday night and Friday morning, Gerow said.

The votes should be counted by Friday afternoon and the union would be in a legal strike position by Monday.

The union has already taken strike votes at three other Lower Mainland hospitals—Lion's Gate, Royal Columbian and Shaughnessy.

Gerow vowed that employees at several Lower Mainland hospitals would be off the job "as soon as humanly possible."

Larry Truitt, director of services at Vancouver General, said, however, it is "business as usual" until the hospital receives official strike notice.

As soon as the strike notice is received, the hospital's contingency plan will be put into effect, Truitt said.

The plan includes curtailment of admissions.

The most critical patients would be held and consolidated in one area of the hospital while others would be discharged, referred to home care programs or other resources, he said.

Strike action, if any, at Victoria's two major hospitals, Royal Jubilee and Victoria General, would come after the 21-day cooling off period in a hospital dispute, but Williams said he would not decide on any course of action until he was on the dispute issues.

The two hospitals is still voting on whether to accept the contract recommendations.

He said today would be the last day for voting and that no plans have yet been made to call a strike vote meeting.

The move to get the two sides together with a mediator officer came from Labor Minister Allan Williams.

Williams said he asked mediator Ed Sims to meet with the industry and the union to determine how far apart they are on the dispute issues.

Gerow said the union is willing to meet with Sims but that it is not prepared to negotiate down from the Blair recommendations.

Williams said he is willing to meet personally at any time with the two parties if it will help avert a strike. Provincial legislation allows the labor minister to impose a 21-day cooling off period in a hospital dispute, but Williams said he would not decide on any course of action until he was on the dispute issues.
